MURDER MYSTERY NOT SOLVED

FILING SUITS IS PUT OFF

Pomerene Says Government Action Is Delayed.

REFUSES TO DISCLOSE REASON

Action Was Promised Monday in a Few Hours.

Certain Matters Have Come Up—Adds There Will Be "Plenty of News Mighty Soon" in That Connection.

Atlee Pomerene, special government prosecutor, yesterday promised action within a few hours Interviewed today he said the government's petition "probably will not be filed today because of certain matters which have come forward for consideration."

Pomerene refused to add to his statement except to say there would be "plenty of news mighty soon." Owen J. Roberts, his colleague, also refused to talk.

MONEY TO PREVENT CRIME

Sociologist Believes That Surplus Wealth Should Be Used to Help the Poor.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 4.—Dr. Chas. A. Ellwood, president of the American Sociological society and chairman of the department of sociology at the University of Michigan, believes that crime can be curbed by taking the surplus incomes of the wealthy to prevent poverty and to make opportunity more equal.

In advancing that solution, Dr. Ellwood differed from Dr. Marx G. Schlapp, New York criminologist, in his statement that so-called crime waves are the products of the "excitement of modern life." He agrees with Dr. Schlapp that the crime problem can be solved.

As a matter of fact, according to Dr. Ellwood, "crime is just as preventable as the measles, at least in 85 or 90 per cent of cases," but in order to solve crime, other methods than putting people in jail or establishing institutional treatment for abnormal persons will have to be used. Dr. Ellwood firmly believes that "we can't put everyone in jail who deserves to be there—the jails are not big enough."

GIVES DRUG TO HER BABY

NEBRASKA CITY WOMAN ALSO ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Mrs. Walter White Tells Neighbor Whom She Calls That She Fed Child Bichloride of Mercury.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., March 1.—According to her own confession to a neighbor, Mrs. Walter White, 1697 Central avenue, gave poison to her thirteen-months-old son Monday shortly after 3 p. m. from the effects of which th einfant died Tuesday at 1 a. m.

The mother had attempted to take her own life in the same way and at an early hour today her condition was critical with but slight hopes of her recovery. About 3:30 p. m. Monday Mrs. Otto Salzbrenner, a neighbor, said Mrs. White had called to her that her baby was dying. The mother said later that she had given the child three bichloride of mercury tablets and had taken an indefinite number herself.

Mrs. White was conscious when physicians arrived but gave no reason for her act. Her husband is employed at the Morton-Gregson company plant. So far as known the couple had no domestic trouble.

POOR GRADES MAKE SUICIDE

St. Louis Boy Found Shot to Death With Unsigned Report Card in Effects.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 4.—An unsigned report card, with poor grades, today was found in the effects of Lewis Eugene Young, eighteen, who committed suicide by shooting last night. Young was the son of a prominent official of the Union Electric Light and Power company here.

The youth was injured playing football at high school last fall, and then barred from some classes because of his poor scholastic work. The grade card which he had not taken to his parents indicated he could not graduate with his class in June.

WOMEN VOTERS TO MEET.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 4.—The board of directors of the National League of Women Voters has issued a formal call for its fifth annual convention to be held here April 24 to 29, inclusive. The convention, which will be presided over by Mrs. Maude Wood Park, national president of the league, will mark the opening of an intensive nation-wide campaign to "get out the vote" for the 1924 election.

PATRONS TO OFFER HELP

T. P. A. ENDORSES BOARD OF EDUCATION PLANS.

Ballots on Increased School Levy to Be Sent Absent Voters—Banks to Take Warrants for Teachers' Payroll.

The board of education received an endorsement from the Lincoln parent-teacher association, thru its president, Mrs. J. H. Frandsen, of the proposed plan to increase the tax levy for school purposes to 15 mills, and an offer to cooperate in a pre-election campaign. Mrs. Frandsen also suggested methods of publicity. The secretary was authorized to acknowledge the receipt of the communication and express the appreciation of the offer of cooperation from the T. P. A.

Samples of the official ballot, to be submitted to voters at the state primary election April 8, and also to be sent to absent voters, was approved by the board. The mill levy proposition to be voted upon provides that commencing with the school year beginning July 1, 1924, a maximum of 15 mills on the dollar may be levied. A number of speaking dates were arranged for members of the board to appear in the different community centers.

Superintendent Lefler, who returned Friday from attending the department of superintendence of the national education association at Chicago, said the two most important features of the session were the proposed revision of the curriculum so as to include the most vital things in education, and the question of adequate financial support of schools thruout the country. Mr. Lefler found that Lincoln was ahead of many cities in the number of modern school buildings, but was behind in providing adequate general support.

The school plan at Winnetka, where students are allowed to advance at any time according to individual ability, was studied by Mr. Lefler, who found defects as well as advantages in the arrangement.

Four Lincoln banks, Central, City, National Bank of Commerce and Nebraska State, have each agreed to take $10,000 in warrants to provide the $40,000 required to pay the teachers' pay roll for the two weeks, due March 7.

FISHERMAN IS CANDIDATE

Hiram Johnston of Michigan Said to Be Base Pretender to Senator's Eminence.

SAGINAW, Mich., March 4.—Hiram Johnston, Saginaw county fisherman and a base pretender, it is said, to the political eminence of Senator Hiram Johnson, today was in that hall of fame which features the presence of "John T. King."

A search for Hiram No 2 revealed that he is probably the most reticent presidential candidate in history.

When petitions to put Johnston's name on the republican presidential primary ballot were filed at Lansing, a political storm broke.

Secretary of State Charles Deland agreed that the name will come off if Johnston so requests.

But Johnston cannot be found.

HONORS HARDING

LYNN B. TIMMERMAN.

Timmerman, motor manufacturer of Lima, O., on Arbor day will assist Mrs. Warren G. Harding to plant the first of twenty-six double miles of trees on the world's longest "Highway of Remembrance." Mr. Timmerman presented enough trees to the city of Lima to line both sides of the twenty-six miles of highway thru Allen county as a fitting memorial to the late president, whom he knew more as an Ohio editor than as the nation's chief executive. Mr. Timmerman sponsored the plan, as well as giving the trees.

HIS CASE UP TO GOVERNOR

FORMER SHERIFF QUINTON REQUESTS REHEARING.

His Attorney Is Requested to File His Reasons—Vacancies Can Be Filled by Election.

Dan W. Livingston of Plattsmouth, attorney for former Sheriff C. D. Quinton, has asked Governor Bryan to grant a rehearing of the order issued by the governor some months ago suspending the sheriff from office. No reason has been given for this request except that the attorneys for Quinton have appealed from the judgment of the Cass county district court which held Quinton guilty of malfeasance in office and ordered him removed from office. The office is being filled by an appointee chosen by the governor and county board.

Governor Bryan said he knows of no reason why his order of suspension should be brought up again. He has asked the attorneys to set forth the grounds for this request. He recalls that he suspended Sheriff Quinton when the latter was indicted by a grand jury. At the sheriff's own request the order of suspension was issued. The appeal of the judgment of the district court has not been passed upon by the supreme court and until that is done there will be no final disposition of the prosecution.

Whether or not the request of the attorneys for Quinton is connected with any effort to fill the office of sheriff at the coming election has not been disclosed to the governor.

Attorney General Spillman said he did not know of any reason why the office of sheriff in Cass county could not be filled by election in November, tho he had not investigated that particular case. He said he had given an opinion holding that the office of sheriff in Keith county can be filled by election for the remainder of the term, which has two years yet to run. In Keith county the sheriff was killed and F. M. Jump was appointed to fill the vacancy.

SHUMWAY IS GIVEN A JOLT

CAPITOL COMMISSION IS IN CHARGE OF GROUNDS.

Board of Educational Lands and Funds Delegated Control of Entire State House Land by Formal Action.

Land Commissioner Dan Swanson, member of the board of educational lands and funds, read a criticism by Secretary Shumway of the department of agriculture against the board permitting capitol contractors to destroy sidewalks and unncessarily litter up the capitol grounds. Mr. Swanson looked in the minute book of the board and found this entry under date of January 25, 1922.

"Moved by Mr. Swanson, seconded by Mr. Amsberry, that the care and control of the entire capitol grounds be turned over to the capitol commission. All members voting in the affirmative, motion prevailed."

While Mr. Swanson does not allege that the board is legally able to delegate control of the grounds to the capitol commission, he regrets that Mr. Shumway's criticism falls upon his chief, Governor Bryan, whether the grounds are really under the control of the board or the commission, for the governor is chairman of both bodies.

The board of eduactional lands and funds found it impracticable to divide responsibility for the capitol grounds during the building of a new capitol. One statute gives this board control of the capitol and grounds. Another statute authorizes the capitol commission to build a capitol upon the site of the present building. It is necessary for one of the bodies to give away to the other.

Most of the damage done to sidewalks on the east side of the building, in the city sidewalk space, has been repaired. The city street commissioner of Lincoln who has control of sidewalk space has thus far not been appealed to settle any differences between the two bodies.

GIVES POLICE A BOOZE TIP

MAN WHO TRIED TO DO FANCY DRIVING FINED.

Told Officers Name of Man He Got Liquor From, But His Charge Is Hotly Denied by Accused.

Jack Anderson charged with drunkenness in police court, said he bought liquor and said he remembered where he had bought it. He now sits in the city jail exchanging hot words with the man whose identity he revealed to the police and who he says sold the liquor.

Jack Anderson, nineteen, 1920 Garfield, and William Ludwig, twenty-one, 1611 D, both employes at the Havelock railroad shops, were arrested Monday at midnight and taken to the station. Anderson was charged with driving a car while drunk and Ludwig with drunkenness, when they faced the judge, Tuesday morning.

At first Anderson could not recall having paid for the hooch nor where he got it, but a few faulty structures in his story led to questioning which brought out the statement that Anderson paid $5 for a pint of alcohol, to a young man who worked in a tailor shop in College View. Anderson said he went to a dance where he shared it with Ludwig. After the dance Ludwig did not feel capable of driving his car home so Anderson came to his assistance.

Anderson's ability to drive the car did not strike the police as worthy of commendation. In fact they thought he did poorly and arrested him forthwith. They say he turned around three times at the intersection on Fourteenth and O, endeavoring to park at the Acme chili parlor, and nearly run thru the chili parlor when he did succeed in heading the car toward the curb.

Anderson was fined $100 and costs by Judge Chappell and a charge of illegal possession is pending. Ludwig who was still sick after the wild night, was not sentenced for the time being and his case was continued to Wednesday morning. The young man Anderson charged was arrested at College View a half hour later. He gave the name of James Milton, aged twenty-two. He denied having sold the liquor. Anderson positively identified him and said he bought liquor there several times. A subpoena was issued for Fred Hart who works at the Havelock shops. Anderson said that Hart was with him when he purchased the alcohol at College View.

ROTARIANS PLAN FOR DRIVE

Community Chest Topic for Discussion at Tuesday Meeting—Eiche Outlines Program.

About two hundred members of Lincoln Rotary were present at a luncheon at the Lincoln hotel Tuesday noon. At the opening of the session J. C. Seacrest of the State Journal and A. Eiche, president of the Community Chest, gave short talks boosting the approaching campaign.

Mr. Eiche in his talk outlined the organization system to be followed in the drive. The four civic clubs of Lincoln, the Rotarians, Kiwanis, Lions and Pathfinders, will have charge of four teams each. The city will be divided into four districts, each district ine harge of one of the clubs. The drive will start March 17.

The remainder of the session was given over entirel yto the discussion o fthe private affairs of the club. There was no formal program.

HALT PROBE FOR ONE DAY

LOCAL TALENT THEORY OF MURDERER IS DEVELOPED.

Seward County Authorities Narrowing Field of Inquiry and Definite Result Expected in Short Time.

SEWARD, Neb., March 4.—The field of inquiry as to who killed Ed. Balster, bachelor farmer living north and west of the town of Utica, is narrowing. The belief now held is that local talent was responsible. The authorities refuse to discuss in whose direction their suspicions are directed, but the steady sifting of the various theories is getting them closer to the actual facts. Neal Olson, chief of police of York, and his assistant, A. E. Carter, sent here by State Sheriff Carroll at the request of Seward county authorities, is helping develop the case.

No session of the jury was held today, but the thread of evidence will be taken up tomorrow. In the meantime it is believed that some valuable information will be dug up or bubble out of the ferment that now grips the town of Utica.

The two theories first held have now been abandoned definitely. The first was that robbers killed him. The other was that he was the victim of chicken thieves whom he surprised in the act of looting his roost. The facts so far known do not support either theory.

From the circumstances it is quite evident that Balster drove into his farm yard about 9:30 Saturday evening; that he put his car into the garage and had started to close its doors when he was shot down. One door had been pulled shut, the other remained open. His body was found a few feet to the east of this open door. A chicken crate that he had brought back from town lay close to one hand and in the other was his house key.

A hundred feet to the north of where he lay is the chicken house, close by which were found two hens with their legs tied. Inside two roosts had been taken down and leaned against the wall.

The tracks of another car were distinctly visible in the soft earth. This car had entered from the west and circled around the farmyard until it came to a stop just a little north of where the dead body was found.

The robber theory gets a black eye from the fact that if one or more men lay in wait for him to come back, they would not have bothered

GAS TAKES A GOOD TUMBLE

MARCH RATE TWO CENTS ON TOBOGGAN SLIDE.

Approximately Twenty-four Cents Less Per Thousand Feet Than for Same Period of First Sliding Scale Year.

The March gas rate is $1.1863 or, in round figures, $1.19 per thousand cubic feet as compared with $1.21 for February and the same figure for January. It is approximately 24 cents less than the first March rate under the present system of fixed charge plus actual cost of gas making materials for the month preceding. This new system was put into practice by act of the city council in February, 1921. The rate then was $1.53. It dropped the next month to $1.42. The arrangement came shortly after final determination of the historic dollar gas case.

The new rate for March is based on the following February material costs per thousand feet:

Coke	$ [illegible]
Enricher	[illegible]
Taxes	0440
Fixed charge	7560
Total	$1.1862

Coke used in January, one determining factor in the February rate, cost $15.07 a ton. The same commodity used during February in determination of the March rate cost $15 a ton.

There are some interesting comparisons found in a study of the rate reports of the company for the various months. For instance, in February, 1921, but 498 tons of coke were used in gas mak as against 576 tons last month. This may be due in part, at least, to the fact that February of this year was longer by a day than February of 1921. The cost per ton during February, 1921, was $18.42 as against $15 last month. During February three years ago 78,000 gallons of enricher costing 0825 cents a gallon were used as against 96,000 gallons at 0479 cents per gallon used last month.

During February 1922, 462 tons of coke costing $13.31 per ton were used and 92,000 gallons of oil at 0526 cents per gallon. The rate for March that year was $1.22, higher than for this month even tho coke then was less. This goes to show the effect of gas make volume on the rate.

FINDS SNAKE IN FRUIT CAR

BOA CONSTRICTOR WAS COILED ABUT BANANA STALK.

Alive But Somewhat Chilled by Ride Thru a March Wind When Discovered by a Workman.

A five foot long boa constrictor, direct from Bananaland, arrived in Lincoln Saturday. This specimen of tropic life beat his way to Lincoln, getting thru without any transportation charge whatever. He was found neatly coiled about the stem of a bunch of bananas unloaded at the Grainger fruit house in Lincoln.

The car had been billed from New Orleans, and the snake was apparently lifeless when found because of the chilly ride he had taken. He was warmed a bit by being placed in a glass jar and he came to life with a grudge against the world in general.

Orville Robertson, 1327 M street, was the workman who found the snake and the find was enough to give him a shock. Mr. Robertson is an employe of the banana room.

The snake will be retained on display in the Grainger office for some time and then will probably be presented to the University of Nebraska. This is the second constrictor to be found in banana cars here but this is by far the largest and best specimen of the two.

URGES JAIL FOR QUACKS

American Medical Congress Hears Educational Requirements Need Raising.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Jail sentences for "quacks and charlatans" were advocated here today at the American Medical association congress.

"A few healthy jail sentences would help eliminate the tricksters in the medical profession," Prof. L. Banzhaf of Marquette University declared.

David L. Edsall, dean of the Harvard medical school, suggested raising of the educational requirements of doctors as one way of keeping incompetents out of the profession.

WRECK DELAYS TRAFFIC

Broadway Limited Is Derailed at Bellevue, Pa., in the Early Morning.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 4.—Traffic on the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad was delayed several hours today when the Broadway limited, New York to Chicago, was derailed at Bellevue, just outside this city.

A score of passengers were thrown from their berths.

The engine is said to have struck a huge rock which had fallen from the hillside.

The engineer and fireman jumped from the cab, and were saved when the engine toppled over.

WALSH PRESENTS HIS LETTERS TO DOHENY

Refused To Go Into Partnership With Oil Man Last December.

WILLIAM J. BURNS ON STAND

McLean Appointed Agent of Justice Department.

INDIRECT WORD TO M'LEAN

Thought Publisher Might Prefer to Resign Rather Than "Embarrass the Attorney General."

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Forestalling efforts on the part of powerful influences to "get him" for his uncovering of the oil scandals, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Montana, today sprung a new sensation by presenting to the senate oil committee correspondence between himself and E. L. Doheny, California oil magnate, regarding a suggestion that they become associated in Montana oil operations.

The correspondence disclosed that last December, Walsh and Doheny were exchanging letters and telegrams relative to a possible association in the drilling of offset wells in Montana.

The suggestion came from State Senator Hogan of Montana, Walsh said in a letter to Doheny. Walsh's letter made no proposal of his participation in the project, but Doheny replied by wire, suggesting that Walsh or his brother John, join him in the work. Walsh immediately declined. In a letter replying to Doheny's telegram, he said he held it unwise to engage in any business dependent in any way on government favor. Walsh then mentioned that some years ago he declined to participate in a sheep ranch because it was based on agovernment lease. "I prefer to be thought over-sensitive than to be under suspicion of having utilized the position to which my people have elevated me for my own profit," Walsh said.

The dates of the correspondence showed that it was passing between the senator and the oil magnate at the very time the oil investigation was approaching the first sensational disclosures.

Walsh had been warned that the correspondence was to be used against him, in an effort to make it appear that he was clandestinely negotiating with Doheny just before he brought out the damaging disclosures which involved Fall, Doheny, Sinclair and McLean.

Six of the McLean code telegrams, which figure in the Washington publisher's efforts to prevent the senate oil committee from getting at the secret of his connection with the oil scandal, were translated today for the committee.

Among the code telegrams was one hitherto not disclosed, sent from Los Angeles by "J. A. Y." to E. L. Doheny, in Washington after he had testified before the committee. The committee will seek to determine authorship of this message.

Mrs. Jessie Duckstein, wife of E. B. McLean's private secretary, today told the Walsh investigating committee that William J. Burns furnished her with the justice department code which was used in transmitting telegrams to McLean at Palm Beach. Mrs. Duckstein said she is a special agent of the department of justice.

Burns, founder of the detective agency bearing his name, and now head of the Bureau of Investigation of the department of justice, took the stand shortly before noon.

He testified McLean was appointed an agent of the department of justice "some time in this administration."

Burns said he suggested Mrs. Duckstein inform her husband McLean's connection with the department was being investigated.

He said he thought McLean might wish to resign rather than have disclosure of his connection "embarrass the attorney general."

Burns admitted that the code used in communicating with McLean is not obsolete. It is still in use by the department. (Burns gave the impression a few days ago in an interview that it was obsolete.)

Francis H. McAdoo, son of William G. McAdoo, democratic presidential candidate, was called to the stand after burns was dismissed.

After hearing McAdoo explain how he and his father were retained as counsel for McLean in 1919, the committee adjourned until tomorrow.

Reads Messages.

W. F. Freidman, war department code expert, who deciphered the messages, read them with the committee this morning resumed its hearings.

Here are the decoded messages which hitherto have not been revealed. The contents of others already have been decoded and printed.

RIVER ICE IS PASSING OUT

LOWER STRATUM VERY THICK BUT HONEYCOMBED.

Water Flow Is Light and This Is Permitting Melting Before Heavy Movement of Big Cakes.

Railroad men who have watched the Platte river for years expressed the belief Tuesday morning that the ice will go out with a minimum of damage. The light flow of water the continued warm weather which has caused the ice to melt, honeycomb and become rotten, and continued work on the river keeping channels open, have been factors in the situation tending to make serious trouble remote.

Frank R. Mullen, Burlington superintendent at Lincoln, spent Sunday and Monday on the Platte river, being at Kearney, Central City and Columbus. He spent Monday at Columbus, where water got over Burlington tracks for a time during the day. He said the channels were being kept clear and that the surface ice was rather light to cause much trouble. The lower stratum, ice from ten to twenty-four inches thick, on the bottom of the river, was beginning to come to the surface Monday, and it was moving in cakes as large as a city lot. When one of these cakes would strike a bridge piling it made the bridge tremble.

The Union Pacific was doing much blasting east of Columbus. Burlington bridge men at Columbus could hear the blasting east of them, which they said was continuous and had been going on for several days.

A report reached Lincoln Tuesday morning that the Union Pacific had lost about forty feet of double track near Columbus and that high water was threatening more damage.

River ice is passing out rapidly and reports show that the river from west of Kearney to the Missouri is shedding its winter coat.

DEFEND CONTRACTS IN SUPREME COURT

Elkhorn Insurance Company Under Attack Because of Alleged Secret Advantage to Its Charter Members.

The Elkhorn Life & Accident insurance company of Norfolk was in supreme court Tuesday defending a contract entered into in the beginning of its corporate existence, by which all of the surviving members of the 250 persons who took out charter membership certificates are entitled to receive 5 per cent of the first annual premium paid by a new member. The suit is one brought by Charles A. Durland, a policyholder, to enjoin the payment of these percentages and to declare the contracts null and void.

Attorneys for Mr. Durland said that the company had no power to issue them in the beginning; that as the company is a mutual one no one member can have any privilege that is not open to all, and that it was in reality a promoter's scheme by which they were to secretly advantage themselves. They insisted that nothing ever appeared in the advertisements of the company that informed prospective members of the existence of this contract, nor did any of the agents ever disclose it in their solicitation.

Immediately after suit was brought the company notified the eighty surviving charter members that their certificates had been called into question, and only nine insisted on defending the lawsuit. Attorneys for the company told the supreme court that the company was formed by five Norfolk men with the laudable purpose of launching a company that would, by drawing large sums to the city, enhance its business prosperity; that in order to start the company it was necessary to have 250 members; that paying 5 per cent of the first annual premium was not so great a draft upon the corporate funds as the agent's commission on stock life business, and that instead of meaning a total draft of $1,000,000 as claimed by Durland in the end, the cost was so small as to make it almost negligible; that the holders are not promoters, but organizers, and that the consideration they gave for the contracts was the risk of their insurable age, the loss of their money, the safety of their insurance and the welfare of their beneficiaries.

QUAKE IN COSTA RICA

Severe Shocks at Port Limon and San Jose Continuing Over Three Hours.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Severe earthquake shocks occurred at Port Limon, Costa Rica, early today, according to private advices reaching here.

The quakes were severe at San Jose, also, many houses being damaged.

The first shock was felt at 5 a. m. and the trembling was continuing at 8 a. m.

The first tremor started at 4:15 a. m. and lasted for fifty minuts. It was very intense, Rev. Father Kremer declared. The second started at 5:45 a. m. and lasted about ten minutes, being much lighter than the first.

Rev. Father Kremer said the instrument indicated the shock was about 2,000 miles from here in a southwesterly direction.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Earthquake shocks were registered on the weather bureau seismograph here today.

The first quake started at 4:15 a. m. and reached its maximum intensity at 4:27. Minor shocks continued until 8:30.

The distance was 2,175 miles from Chicago.

JURY TO DECIDE HER FATE

To Term Mrs. Harris Either a Love Child or Mistress of Memphis Gambler.

NEW YORK, March 4. — Love child or mistress of a Memphis gambler—a jury of twelve men will be asked today to decide concerning the origin and early life of beautiful Elaine Lee Harris and whether she deceived her banker husband concerning her past.

The defense in the annulment suit brought by Beverly D. Harris, a former vice president of the National City bank, against his young wife, played its trump card Monday night when the defendant declared on the stand that her husband knew she was an illegitimate child and was proud and glad of it.

Harris' suit is based upon a charge that his wife was mistress of Eli Eli Raynor, a noted southern gambler. Asked point blank if this were true, Mrs. Harris' voice rose in a scream as she cried: "No, No!"

She said that she was Raynor's daughter—born to the gambler and her mother out of wedlock—and that her husband had been aware of this and told her that often such children were far more lovely than those of married parents. Harris told her about Alexander Hamilton, she said, and sent her a book that was the story of a love child.

On cross-examination, Mrs. Harris was pressed concerning the identity of a certain sister, "Susie," or Samela.

"Susie" has not been produced, but the defense has put several witnesses on the stand who differentiated between her and Mrs. Harris. The plaintiff's counsel claims, however, that "Susie" and the dfeendant are one and the same person.

PITY THE REVENUE AGENTS.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y. (By mail) —The gentry thruout this section, who make a specialty of bumping the Volstead act, are chortling with glee because a flock of federal agents recently worked like longshoremen unloading a carload of hay they had been tipped off contained nose-paint. It was a bum steer. No one of the bales contained a thing but timothy.

Your Problems

BY MARY GORDON

Dear Mary Gordon: Every night when The Journal arrives, the first thing I read is your column. Now I've stood it just as long as I can "I've got to speak or bust." Some of those letters from the "Smokers," and "Petters" just make my hair turn red.

Nearly every day some one is complaining because the boys pay more attention to the wild girls than they do to the nice ones. Why, of course they do. Men always have had a great streak of curosity in their make up. I guess you'd call it the "original sin" in them.

Every new girl that comes along some of these "marvelous males" must try her out to see how many kinds of a fool they can make her. And rather than stand back and wait until the right man comes along, and rather than have the boy talk of his wild time, the girl will go with him again, (if she isn't the proper kind of a girl who has enough sense and backbone to say no!) But if she's wild and enjoys his wild party she'll go again.

I know, for I've been called "Mama's girl" more than once because I wouldn't stand for this disgusting mush stuff. I suppose some of your readers will say, "Oh well, she's nothing but a darned old maid and this "mush stuff" to her is sour grapes." But my dears, you're mistaken. I'm married and have been for a couple of years, and what is more of a calamity still, "I love my husband." He's not an angel by any means, but his only bad habit is smoking, and his worst fault is that he still loves his wife. Isn't that enough to start a scandal, Mary?

A few days ago I heard a woman say "Ashes to ashes and dust to dust —show me a man that a woman can trust." She went on to say that there wasn't a man in the whole world who could be trusted. Don't you think Mary, that that's a pretty big order? It's no wonder people get suspicious of each other. One woman like that would have the effect of a rotten apple in a bushel of good ones. She'd sour every one.

"Home Spun" your party sounds like Home Sweet Home to me. And what if you do get a few blisters on your hands from pulling candy, as most folks do, they won't disfigure your soul and conscience as such parties as Jazz Baby's certainly would.

"True Bachelor Friend of all True Girls," I want to say that I admire your stand. I had an older brother who helped me get an education and put himself thru college, at the same time. No one can tell how much I appreciated it, and I'm sure your sister will too. Be her pal. For good girls need help from clean, manly brothers.

"Undecided," what do you mean by being in high school with two boys chasing after you when you are only sixteen. Haven't you enough school work to keep you busy? If not, why don't you spend your leisure time in reading good books rather than bothering your sixteen year old brain with the boys. Plenty of time for that later.

So you think Omaha is "rank" do you, Jess? Well I'm from Omaha and I'm not sorry of it. So there! Just because the only back yards you are acquainted with in Omaha have decaying roosters buried in them, you don't need to think they all have. You've surely heard the story about the colored glasses. Everyone isn't looking through your glasses thank goodness when they look at the world.

"Look for goodness
Look for gladness.
You will find them if you do.
As you measure
To your neighbor,
He will measure back to you."

Well Mary, if I may I'll come again and let off more steam.—Calamity Jane.

A. I like your explanation of why the men are attracted by "wild" girls.

Surely some men can be trusted. I know several. When I stop to count them, they number almost every man of my acquaintance. Delighted to have you return some time.

Dear Mary Gordon: I have just read "E. N. W's." letter. He said he would like to hear from a girl who isn't "mushy." Well here is one.

I agree with him about most of the girls of today. But there are a good many modest girls too. I am a girl of seventeen and have had some experience with "mushy" girls and boys. I don't care for their company and I would rather be alone than with them.

Mary, is three nights a week too much for a girl my age to be out with my sister?

I would like to know of some one who wants a good winter hat. I have only worn it once but don't like the style of it. I will gladly pay the postage on it to the one who wants it. Hoping I may come again.—M. A. W.

A. Being up late three nights a week is too much, I fear. You should be in bed by 10:30 every night in the week, except perhaps, one.

Surely, come again.

Dear Mary Gordon: Will you please print a good recipe for molasses cookies? Would also like to know how to remove yellow stains from ivory piano keys.—Mrs. E. L. V.

Molasses Drop Cookies.

Place in saucepan
1 cup of cold black coffee.
1 cup of molasses.
½ cup of shortening.
1 cup of brown sugar.

Heat slowly to boiling point and cook for five minutes. Turn in mixing bowl and cool, and add
1 package of seeded raisins
½ cup of chopped nuts.
2 cups of sifted flour.
3 level tablespoons of baking powder.

Work well together; form on baking sheet by dropping from the spoon in little piles about three inches apart. Bake in moderate oven for twelve minutes. When all the cookies are baked place in bowl 1-2 cup of syrup and 4 tablespoons of boiling water. Stir to blend. Use pastry brush and brush over each cookie and then roll part of the cookies in chopped cocoanut and part in granulated sugar. Some may be rolled in finely chopped nuts.

Try rubbing alcohol on the discolored piano keys. You might also use a silver cleaner which is advertised for use on ivory. Inquire at any store.

Dear Mary Gordon: I read an inquiry concerning "folding bath tubs." I, too, once moved into a small town where bath tubs were unknown. I couldn't stand it, and in desperation bought a folding tub. Aside from the inconvenience of filling and emptying them, I am glad to say they do "fill the bill." They beat no bath tub a long way.

We used ours over two years (until we moved back to a larger town) and it was still in good condition when we sold it. Looked as though it would be usable for another five years at least.—A Reader.

A. Thank'you for the information.

SHOOTING CASE IS STILL BEING HEARD

Davis-Meyer Shotgun Affair Is Before the District Court With the State's Side About Complete.

The state finished its testimony in the Davis-Meyer shotgun case early Tuesday morning. Otto Meyer, the complaining witness being the only one to testify against Mrs. Davis in the action against her for shooting Mr. Meyer with intent to inflict great bodily injury.

A white Panama hat, worn by Meyer September 26, the day of the shooting, was produced in evidence. Several small holes and lead marks showed the effects of the double barreled load directed at him by Mrs. Davis.

Mrs. Nannie I. Davis, the defendant, her husband, and William T. Whitehead, her brother, took the stand for the defense at the morning session. In their testimony it was disclosed that Meyer's runaway hogs which are supposed to have caused all the trouble, were not restrained in any manner from running away.

The three witnesses described in detail the break that occurred August 10, when Meyer appeared in the doorway of the Davis milk barn with a hammer in his hand saying that he wishe to settle the damage done by his hogs, and ended up by the alleged threatening of the lives of Davis "and the whole outfit."

Meyer admitted on the stand having paid a fine for assault and battery for his part in the hammer incident which preceded the shooting. Mrs. Davis took the stand and in relating the incidents leading up to the shooting, stated that she had found Meyer down near their barn and when she accosted him for trespassing he swore at her and called her vile names.

Mrs. Davis stated that he had a club in his hands and she sent one of the children for a shotgun. She said that Meyer threatened her with the club and told her to drop the gun. Her reply was that she would shoot.

Meyer is then said to have thrown th eclub at Mrs Davis with the defiant cry, "Shoot and be damned," and taken to his heels. Mrs. Davis then gave him both barrels of the shotgun but none of the pellets took effect.

The two families live on adjoining farms about five miles nort hof Havelock. They were on the best of terms until the frequency of Meyer's hogs' invasions of the Davis fields caused relations to become strained.

MRS. CONGER HAS FAITH IN HUSBAND

Lincoln Woman Is Confident That Story of Shooting Will Clear Howard Conger of All Blame.

MEXICO, Mo., March 4.—Howard D. Conger, traveling salesman of Lincoln, Neb., who was shot and seriously wounded Saturday afternoon by the Rev. Asa Q. Burns, is resting comfortably at the Amanda hospital, according to a report today noon.

Mr. Conger refused to make any statement, saying that his attorney advised him to say nothing whatever. Mrs. Conger, wife of the salesman, who arrived Sunday from Lincoln, said in an interview: "I have faith and confidence in Mr. Conger. I guess that is only natural. I know that when he gets better and strong that he will absolutely clear himself. I have all faith in him."

Mrs. Conger was asked if she could relate the incident as it was told by her husband, but she said she felt that Mr. Conger could do so much better when he became stronger, that she would rather let him tell the story himself.

"It is natural for people to believe the worst," she said, "but I know that when the time comes Mr. Conger will be able to clear himself."

False Modesty Wrecks Health

THE young lady just assuming the responsibilities of a woman is very apt to be self-conscious of her physical functions, and in consequence neglect them. There is no time, however, when it is more important for her to look after them. Chief among her troubles is constipation, and her suffering will be serious when she gets older if she does not regulate her bowels now. Mrs. Mary Kellar of 132 Benton St., Sisterville, W. Va., was perplexed about her daughter until her own druggist told her they used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at his house, and she did likewise. Miss Irene Mazieraka of 90 Peter St., Buffalo, N. Y., is glad her attention was called to Syrup Pepsin.

Safe for Young and Old

Let mothers with growing daughters interest themselves in this matter and see that their judgment is enforced. A rule followed by many is to take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin once a week until the bowels function daily, and at such other times as there is headache, biliousness, sores and fever blisters, lack of energy and appetite, sleeplessness, indigestion.

A dose can be given in these conditions to any member of the family however young or old as Syrup Pepsin is a simple compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasing aromatics, and perfectly safe.

Public Recognizes Merit

You will quickly see the difference between a mild laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and castor oil, or rough cathartics and physics. Syrup Pepsin acts gently and does not gripe. Increased doses are not necessary. A bottle can be had at any drug store, and a spoonful costs less than a cent. It has been successfully used for thirty years and is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles having been sold in drug stores last year. Keep Syrup Pepsin in your medicine chest.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

SEEK CLUES ON SLAYING

INQUEST ON KILLING OF ED BALSTER UNDER WAY.

No Additional Facts Disclosed at Session, Part of Which Is Secret, But Believed Thieves Were Surprised.

SEWARD, Neb., March 3—It is believed that chicken thieves, who were surprised by the early return of Ed Balster to his farm near Utica, Neb., Saturday night, shot Balster in cold blood when they were afraid that perhaps he had recognized them. An inquest which was called at 2 p. m., Monday at Utica, by County Attorney McKillip, adjourned late in the afternoon until Wednesday afternoon. The evidence which was presented cast no new light on the killing.

Ed Balster, forty years old, bachelor farmer, was found lying dead in front of his garage at 8:30 p. m. Sunday with a bullet wound in his breast. He had been dead since the previous night.

Part of the inquest was held behind closed doors and was not made public. No new information was obtained however, concerning the theory that the case has a connection with that of a gang of men who recently tortured a farmer named Schumann and that Balster was said to have known the identity of some of the men, according to authorities.

Authorities were at the scene of the shooting early Monday making an investigation which they are continuing. Two chickens were found tied together on the ground a few feet east of the chicken house. A pair of dress gloves was found between the chicken house and the garage. Tracks made by the auto of the assailants were found, according to Mr. McKillip. The machine had chains and evidently was a heavy car.

Henry and Lewis Balster, father and brother of the victim testified at the inquest. They said that they did not know of any enemies who might have made the attack. Following Monday's proceedings, Mr. McKillip was of the opinion that the chicken thieves had been surprised by the sudden arrival of Balster to the farm. It is thought that he might have put up a fight. A broken stick was found not far from the body. Mr. Balster was shot with a shotgun and sustained a powder burn.

Testimony brought out was that the victim had left Utica at 9:30 p. m. Saturday. He did some trading and then waited for the mail to be distributed at the postoffice. The driveway into the Balster farm is a long lane which leads in from the west toward the garage.

TALKS FOR PAROLE SYSTEM

Warden Fenton and State Sheriff Carroll Speak.

Warden Fenton and State Sheriff T. W. Carroll were the speakers of the evening at the regular monthly meeting of Fourth Degree Knight of Columbus at the Grand Hotel Monday evening.

Warden Fenton told the group that he was in favor of the parole law, for the reason that many of the young men who come to the penitentiary are not criminals at heart, but are the result of unfortunate circumstances and if given another chance, will nearly always make good. He stated that only fourteen per cent of the prisoners paroled, are ever brought back again. He spoke of Christian education in the home, and stated that the lack of it, is the cause of the present crime wave that is sweeping the country. He also remarked that "if the death penalty is given for murder it should also be given to 'dope' peddlers."

BRYAN'S NAME ONLY ONCE ON THE BALLOT

It Will Appear in Connection With the Presidency at the Primary Only as a Defensive Measure.

There is no indication at the capitol that Governor Bryan will permit his name to be filed on the primary ballot as a preferential candidate for president. Petitions in circulation placing him in nomination have not appeared. He is already a nominee for governor. It is alleged by democrats close to the governor that his name will not go before the people of Nebraska for president except as a defensive measure. If another democratic candidate goes upon the ballot the name of Governor Bryan will also appear with his consent, according to the way the party workers have it doped out. Unless there is a presidential candidate on the ballot the state delegation will go without instructions.

That the delegation to the democratic national convention, which is composed largely of Bryan democrats, may be hampered by instructions coming from the writing in of the name of a presidential candidate has been considered by party workers, but little fear of the result is entertained. The indications now are that the democrats of the state will not be given an opportunity to express their presidential preference except by writing in of names. A blank on the primary ballot for that purpose is required by law.

Unless Henry Ford requests the withdrawal of his name he will appear upon the ballot as a progressive party candidate for president. The presence of his name there is not giving politicians much uneasiness.

Secretary of State Pool finds no law which allows him to accept nominations for the primary later than Saturday evening, or thirty days before the primary. He is now disposed, as were many of his predecessors, to reject any filing that reaches him later than that date, regardless of whom it comes from or whether it was placed in the mails prior to the closing one hour on Saturday.

The republican state committee takes no part in contest between candidates at the primaries but it is urging local republican organizations to see that republican nominees for the legislature are chosen in every district.

Grosvenor Pays His Respects.

J. H. Grosvenor of Aurora, an attorney and former member of the legislature, called on Governor Bryan Monday. Mr. Grosvenor is a candidate in the Fourth congressional district for delegate to the democratic national convention. He got into the race after the Bryan candidates in that district had filed for nomination. Following his entrance as a candidate it was reported that he is a supporter of McAdoo and had been instrumental in trying to get McAdoo's name upon the ballot in Nebraska as a candidate for president.

Whether Mr. Grosvenor came to explain to the governor that he is not opposed to the Bryan slate was not disclosed.

"There is nothing in the rumor that I am tied up with the McAdoo supporters or tried to get McAdoo upon the primary ballot in this state," said Mr. Grosvenor. "I have from the beginning announced that I would support Governor Bryan for president if his name comes before the national convention, and I would do the same of the name of W. J. Bryan is presented. I have also stated that I would not favor any reactionary element in the democratic party, regardless of whence it comes, and I would not favor the nomination of any man who would tamper with the Volstead act or try to injure prohibition."

Bert Sprague, district court reporter and now an attorney of York, called on Governor Bryan Monday. He was secretary of the democratic state committee several years ago.

FLORISTS WILL CONVENE

Amusements.

The Matinee Musicale.

An exceptionally beautiful program of numbers for voice and piano was presented before the Matinee Musicale Monday afternoon. Miss Vera Augusta Upton and Mrs. R. O. Hummel sang two big duets with great dignity, in beautiful tones and with fine ensemble art. They were accompanied with great sympathy by Mrs. Carrie B. Raymond.

The second part was made up of five piano solos played with exquisite finish and interpretation by Mrs. Will Owen Jones, and a fantasy by Arensky, for two pianos, for which Miss Mariel Jones played the orchestral parts. Mrs. Jones opened with MacDowell's "Preludium," a work with massive chords which gave an impressive beginning to the group. The numbers which followed brought out the delicate phrasing and tone-shading which are notable features of Mrs. Jones' performance. The Arensky-Fantasy is a beautiful and difficult composition and as played by Mrs. Jones and her daughter was remarkable for the unity of effect in the concerted work. The Russian themes, linked together in intricate style by Arensky at times took the form of delicately interwoven trilly runs which were delightfully played by both pianists.

The president, Mrs. Lewis H. Trester, announced that a reception and musicale, to which all present and former members of the Matinee Musicale will be invited, will be given Monday, March 31, as a feature of the thirtieth year of the Matinee Musicale, now being celebrated. The program was as follows:

Duets—Quis est Homo, from "Stabat Mater," Rosini; Light of Thy Beauty, from "Julius Cesar," Handel; Vera Augusta Upton and Mrs R. O. Hummel. Mrs. Carrie B. Raymond, accompanist.

Piano—Preludium, MacDowell; Andantino and variations, Schubert-Tausig; Spring Night, Schumann-Liszt; Nocturne, Ferrari, Colonial Song, Grainger; Fantasie on Russian themes, Arensky—Mrs. Will Owen Jones.

The orchestral parts for the Arensky Fantasie to be played on second piano by Mariel Jones.

YEGGS ROB APARTMENT

Thieves Visit Melick Court Monday Afternoon and Make Away With Loot.

A first floor apartment at Melick court, Thirteenth and K was entered between 1 and 2 p. m., Monday and $50 in cash and two rings, valued at $95 were stolen from Mr. and Mrs. Lew Hankins. A ring valued at $25 and owned by Agnes Quinn was also taken. Police were not notified until late in the afternoon. It is believed that the job was pulled by two men who were around the place in the morning and were seen begging. Entrance was gained thru a window which was left open.

Mr. Hankins went to his apartment at 2 o'clock. He says that he saw that the contents of the room had been disturbed, but thought that his wife had been working there. When Mrs. Hankins returned Mrs. Melick was notified and police were called. All four rooms of the apartment were ransacked, dressed drawers left open and a trunk opened. The $50 was taken from the trunk. A diamond ring valued at $85 and an agate ring valued at $10 were taken from the dresser. A ruby ring valued at $25 was taken from the room of Miss Quinn. The janitor was at work in the room across the hall at the time the theives were at work.

The janitor, E. J. Delaney said that the two men had come to the back door at 10:30 a. m. and asked for shoes, also inquiring as to the location of the landlady's room and other details regarding the lay of the house. One of the men was there Saturday evening begging and the other was there Sunday evening on the same mission, according to the janitor.

He described the men as being fairly well dressed, one very large, about six feet tall and weighing 190 pounds and perhaps twenty-three years old. He wore two sweaters and was dark complexioned. The other man was small and wore a dark suit. Both were wearing fuzzy hats.

Cause of Death Is Mystery.

WYMORE, Neb., March 3.— The body of Albert Bradley, fifty-eight, former resident of Wymore, arrived here Sunday from Norfolk and was buried in the Wymore cemetery. A mystery surrounds the death of Bradley. Relatives who went to Norfolk and accompanied the body home stated that they did not get to talk to Bradley before he died, and that it was understood that he said before his death that he was injured in an automobile accident. How or where, or under what circumstances, is unknown. Bradley, at the time of the injury, was employed in a Norfolk auto shop. He owned a car of his own, but it was found at the place where he lived, undamaged. He suffered internal injuries and severe cuts on the head and face, which, it was understood, were caused by wind shield glass. Bradley was a married man, but was not living with his wife.

TAKE TESTIMONY IN SHOTGUN CASE

Attorney Admits That Mrs. Nannie I. Davis Fired Shot at Otto Meyer, But Pleads Self Defense.

The Davis-Meyer shotgun case in which the defendant Nannie I. Davis, is charged with shooting with intent to inflict great bodily harm, came to trial before District Judge Shepherd Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Davis' attorney in his opening statement said that they would admit that Mrs. Davis had shot at Mr. Meyer, but stated that it was done in self defense after Meyer had sworn to "get her husband and her and the whole bunch."

It was brought out in the evidence by Otto Meyer's testimony, that the two families who live on neighboring farms about five miles north of Havelock, had been having some trouble because Meyer's hogs frequently got out and invaded the Davis cornfields.

It was claimed by the defense that this was a frequent occurrence and that their constant protests to Meyer about the invasion of his hogs made him angry and he threatened vengeance. Things went from bad to worse until on August 10, 1923, an open break occurred which resulted in Meyer's paying a small fine in a justice court for assaulting Mr. Davis. From this time on until the shooting September 26, the families stayed apart.

On the evening of September 26, Mr. Meyer missed one of his hogs and went over to the Davis' farm to look for it. According to Mrs. Davis' story she became frightened at his entering the premises and after finding him near the barn, sent one of her sons after the gun.

Meyer said on the stand that Mrs. Davis called to him from a distance and demanded that he come to her, at the same time inquiring his reason for trespassing. He said that he explained his action and told of his search for his lost hog.

"Well, why didn't you come to the house and ask about it instead of sneaking around down here?" Mrs. Davis is said to have inquired.

"When she said that, I saw the boy coming with the gun," said Meyers," and I ran. She gave me both barrels but I was too far away."

After the shooting Mrs. Davis is said to have secured a revolver from the house and run out into the road where some graders were at work, demanding that they call her husband immediately.

Mr. Meyer's testimony concluded the afternoon session. The hearing was ordered to be resumed at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

They Know

The way to whiter teeth. Will you not find it out?

Those many people you meet with glistening teeth do something you should do.

You see them everywhere today. They have gained new beauty and new charm. But they have also gained new cleanliness, new safety.

They use a new method of teeth cleaning. Let this test show how much it means to you.

They combat the dingy film

You feel on teeth a viscous film. That is what clouds teeth.

Under old-way brushing, much of that film remains. It becomes discolored, then forms dingy coats, to make the teeth unsightly and unclean.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Such troubles became almost universal, due to attacks caused by film.

Science has sought ways to combat that film. It has found two which proved effective in many careful tests. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation, one removes it without harmful scouring.

Authorities have endorsed these methods. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Leading dentists everywhere began to advise it. Now careful people of some 50 nations employ this tooth paste daily.

This short test is convincing

The user of Pepsodent sees at once results which old ways never brought.

The new benefits are necessary. Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids. It multiplies the ptyalin in saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth.

The combined results bring one a new conception of what brushing should accomplish.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth became whiter as the film-coats disappear.

Then decide between the new way and the old. Do this for your home's sake. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

ATTEMPT TO HUSH AFFAIR

PROSPECTIVE OIL WITNESSES ARE BEING WORKED ON.

Efforts Also Made to Delve Into Senator Walsh's Past and Discredit His Part in the Senate Probe.

WASHINGTON, aMrch 4.—Powerful influences are already at work seeking to intimidate and "hush up" prospective witnessrs in the senate investigation of Attorney General Daugherty's administration of the department of justice, it was disclosed here today.

At the same time, a plot to discredit Senator Thomas J. Walsh, who opened up the oil scandal, was revealed.

Scores of investigators have been digging up every detail of Walsh's past life and have been prying into the affairs of members of his family.

Walsh's friends see in this a plan to discredit him so as to force him to drop the oil investigation, or to destroy the weight of his disclosures.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, in whose hands the direction of the Daugherty inquiry has been placed by the investigating committee, today made known the efforts to hush up witnesses in that investigation when he announced that from now on every move of the committee would be veiled in deepest secrecy.

"We know already that efforts have been made to hush up certain witnesses," Wheeler said. "I am fearful that efforts will be made to keep them from testifying. Because of this, the committee cannot reveal any of the 'leads' on which it is working, nor make public the names of witnesses it has subpoenaed."

Wheeler made known that certain witnesses called by the senate oil committe in connection with department of justice matters had likewise had pressure put on them to keep them from testifying.

Wheeler today was hard at work with a legal assistant sifting the mass of material in the committee's possession. The committee appointed him as a sub-committee to draft a program of procedure, choose the matters to be investigated and set the date for the opening hearing.

At a private meeting of the committee today, Wheeler will make his first report and it is understood, as for the issuance of the first batch of subpoenaes. The first public hearing will be held late this week or the first of next week.

IOWA G. O. P.'S CONVENE

Fate of Coolidge to Be Partially Dependent Upon the Des Moines Gathering.

DES MOINES, March 4.—The fate of Calvin Coolidge for next president of the United States will be greatly affected by the action of the Iowa republican delegate convention in session here today.

The convention here is the first in the United States to choose delegates to the national gathering of republicans at Cleveland in June. Twenty-nine delegates will be selected.

Veteran politicians point out that should the convention fail to instruct for Coolidge today it would virtually be a notice to the agricultural middle west and Washington that Iowa does not have confidence in the Coolidge administration.

Coolidge workers expressed optimism following caucuses which were conducted thruout the night. Lukewarm delegates who are not opposed to Coolidge but who do not favor tying Iowa's hands with an instructed delegation prefer to give him only a strong endorsement.

Congressman L. J. Dickinson of the tenth district will act as temporary chairman. The convention will convene for business at 11 a. m.

DES MOINES, Ia., March 4.—The first convention this year to select delegates to the republican national convention in Cleveland was held here today by the republicans of Iowa.

Twenty-nine delegates will be selected.

Supporters of President Coolidge believe the convention will instruct the delegates for Mr. Coolidge. Another element, however, favors sending an uninstructed delegation.

At the county caucuses recently, Mr. Coolidge received almost overwhelming endorsement.

ASKED TO STOP EXHAUST PIPES

COLUMBUS, O., (By mail.)—Governors of states are asked to undertake many strange jobs.

Perhaps the most unusual request made to Gov. A. Vic. Donahey, of Ohio, was contained in a telegram from C. E. Baughman, New Marshfield, Athens county, which read: "For three weeks we have had no sleep at night on account of two exhaust pipes from dynamo engines situated across the alley from my dwelling. State prosecutor will not act and judge will not set my case for hearing. He is too busy with bootleggers. I gave a lawyer $25 a few months ago and he stopped it for a time. Will I have to move? What can I do?" Donahey took the matter under advisement.

BOUDOIR MIRRORS OF WASHINGTON

When Climbers Try To Climb.

If you look in the telephone directory in Washington you will find about forty Hardings. Yet when you say "Mrs. Harding," everyone knows exactly whom you mean. There is no need to say "Mrs. Warren Harding," or "Mrs. Warren Gamaliel Harding." She is simply the Mrs. Harding.

The real test of social superiority is not the accumulation of distinguishing names but the ability to discard them all and retain your identity. If some day there is a Smith or Brown in the white house, it will be the same. Should we have half a dozen representatives with the same, say Johnston, it is the one who becomes the Johnston and can discard the baptismal tag who has achieved distinction. He has risen above the rock.

And so with his wife. When you can say "Mrs. Johnston," denoting a specially distinctive woman who needs no qualification for identification—then, the prestige of being the Mrs. Johnston is here. In short, she has arrived. The higher you go, the less labelling you need.

But oh! what importance is attached to names that look well in print! People are often invited to functions not because of their brains or wit or beauty but because of their name. Conversationally they may be like unto cold pudding and be as graceful as an old bus horse but if they bear a name that looks well in the newspapers they are acquitted of all else. If you don't believe me, just watch the social colums. If there is any other justification for asking some of the frequent guests I'd like to know what it is.

Why, many hostesses are quite candid about it!

"I'm so sorry to put you next to Mrs. Blank . . . I know she's such a bore . . . . but . . . ."

A gentle perssure on your elbow as she propels you toward your fate . . . . a flicker of an eyelash, a quirk at the corner of her mouth . . . you understand the signs. She has taken you into her confidence.

Invitations Cost Nothing.

There is nothing to stop them sending an invitation to Mrs. Hughes, Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Coolidge, Princess Bibesco, Madam Jusserand, Lady Geddes or the Haniharas. And there is no law to prevent these invitation lists being published in the press, especially if the papers print them in good faith. The climbers recognize no social law — yet. All's fair in love and war and social exploitation!

This is a sort of social false pretences, but it is done daily by certain people and associations. They know the guests will never, never accept. They don't expect them to. It is all a bluff.

There are other pushful persons, usually with money or resource and brass-bound sensibilities. Society has not yet opened its door to them so they decide to pick the lock.

A new official is appointed or a foreign celebrity arrives in the city. They are promptly on the scene with their request:

"I want to give a little dinner in your honor: what night will suit you. . . . . Thursday of next week? No! Then perhaps the followig Thursday? . . . . No! Well, what about the Friday after? No! Then let us make it Wednesday three weeks, if that will suit you."

Cornered! And Then.

In despair, seeing no hope of lying an escape through the whole season, the newly-arrived capitulates. Then the pushful person sends out invitations to other great and near-great, baiting the hook with the celebrated guest of honor. Some, out of pity for the guest, accept. Others genuinely grateful, are willing to come. In this way social indebtedness is incurred and the pushful person received reciprocal invitations.

One aspiring matron on the fringe of the official set had decided to capture society in one fell swoop. Her husband, no less ambitious, was her guilty accomplice. She planned a wonderful dinner party of thirty — thirty carefully selected people. If she carried this, it would put the imprimatur of society on her for ever; she felt sure of it.

The caterer was engaged, the decorations ordered, and the household was in a tumult of expectancy.

"It is such a pity," she naively confided to me, "but I have planned my dinner for the most unfortunate night. Everyone seems busy. Do you know I have had twenty-eight regrets from the thirty I invited."

Then following the scriptural example she sent out into the highways and byways and gathered in at very short notice a group of willing participants in the revelry, people whose combined social tonnage wouldn't sink a bag of kittens. But the grateful guests didn't know of the tragedy that underlay that party, of the strategic social advance that failed.

These people are usually great students of books of etiquette and social usage. They like to be letter perfect. By the way, one of the latest guide books through this wilderness states that at the conclusion of the party, the debutante shall say to the hostess: "I've had a perfectly wonderful time!" But the hardy annual merely says "Good-bye!" The omission of "wonderful" indicates that she is not newly-hatched socially and the wonder has quite worn off. Enthusiasm goes with the bud, but a more blase air because the seasoned campaigner. Now don't forget!

HOW POLLY LEARNED TO LOVE TO WORK.

"IF there's one thing I do despise, it's Saturday," Polly pouted as she tumbled out of bed Saturday morning.

"Gracious!" laughed a soft voice, and a queer little funny-faced elfin hopped up on the bed post. "Why do you hate Saturday? Most children love Saturday because they don't have to go to school."

"Oh, it's work, work, work, every Saturday," replied Polly. "And the work is so hard that I hate it."

"If you had to live with a little friend of mine," laughed the elfin, "you might change your mind."

"That's like you, Gocomeback," laughed Polly, "trying to make me think someone works harder than I do. Where and who is she?"

Gocomeback said never a word, but when Polly glanced up again

"Gretchen, This Is Polly."

she was no longer in her own bedroom, but in the loveliest of rooms. Everything in it was as neat and clean as a pin. A door opened and in came a dear little girl, all smiles. She had on a dark blue skirt so full that Polly was almost sure it would stand alone. Her waist was tight and on her head she wore a dear little white bonnet starched stiff.

"Gretchen this is Polly," said Gocomeback, after shaking the little girl's hand. "She has come to Holland to see how you folks keep house."

"Oh, I'm glad to see you," laughed Gretchen. "And you know I love to keep house for my mother."

"Do you like to clean on Saturday?" Polly asked, thinking of the dishes piled high on the kitchen table at home, left over from the night before. "Do you like to sweep and dust and scrub? That's what I have to do every Saturday for my mother."

"Saturday!" exclaimed Gretchen. "Why, my dear, we scrub and dust and clean every day. What would a house look like that was gone over just on Saturday? Goodness! Every morning of the year I sweep and dust and clean the house. After that's done, I go outside and scrub the steps and walks, then take my broom and sweep the street in front of our house."

"Every morning you do all that?" asked Polly. Things did look lovely. She could almost see her face in the kitchen floor. "Not only on Saturdays?"

"Gracious, we don't wait for Saturday," replied Gretchen. "I'm afraid if I did I wouldn't have the heart to do it then. Things would be so dirty by Saturday, I couldn't clean at all."

"We have been taught here in Holland that cleanliness is essential to keep one happy. By going over the house every day, it takes only a little time, for things are not as dirty as they would be after a whole week. So if you'll excuse me, I'll get to-day's work done."

As Gretchen disappeared through the doorway, Holland, Gocomeback and all vanished and Polly found herself in her own untidy kitchen.

That was the last time the supper dishes were left standing on the table. Every morning from that time on, before she even thought of play, Polly cleaned the house. Soon she grew to love her work, and when Saturday rolled around, there was no need to complain for it was no longer a hard day.

WORDS of WISE MEN

We sometimes make frivolous complaints of our friends to justify our own fickleness.

We easily forgive our faults when they are only known to ourselves.

He who lives without folly is not so wise as he thinks.

It is to be a truly virtuous man to wish to be always exposed to the view of virtuous people.

Pride does not like to owe, and self love does not like to pay.

There are ways that lead to everything, and if we had sufficient will we should always have sufficient means.

We do not always love those who admire us, and we do not always love those we admire.

There are follies as catching as contagious disorders.

A man of sense may love like a mad man, but never like a fool.

Elevation is to merit what dress is to a handsome person.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Mrs. Bird Was Thorough in Her Cross-Examination.

MY answer to Mrs. Bird's questions was prompt.

"Just as we were turning in at the gate a mounted policeman passed up and slowed down rather abruptly. He did not stop, but my brother-in-law told me that he looked searchingly at our license plate."

"Did he get your number?" Mrs. Bird queried crisply.

"My brother in law thought so," I replied.

"Of course, he might have been looking for speeders who had escaped," she said thoughtfully.

"That is what Dr. Braithwaite said," I interposed.

"And then, again, he might not," she retorted, a trifle tartly. "Well, at any rate, I'll know by to-night whether or not there's any inquiry out for the children in police circles. I have a brother on the force. In the meantime—when does their ship sail?"

"Day after to-morrow."

She made a clicking little noise with her teeth, expressive of extreme disapprobation.

"Too long a time to wait for this sort of thing," she commented. "Any especial reason for taking this particular boat?"

"Don't Misunderstand Me."

"I do not think so," I returned. "I fancy Mrs Underwood thought it was the earliest one they could get."

"Perhaps it is," she hedged instantly—Lillian's name evidently was an effective stop to criticism—"but it will do no hurt to make a few inquiries, and if there should be a chance to get passage on a ship leaving to-morrow, or even to-night, I believe it would be a good thing to take it."

I suppose my face reflected my startled dismay at the uneasiness which I thought must lie behind her haste to get us off, for she shot a shrewd look at me.

"Don't misunderstand me," she said. "I haven't any especial reason for fearing any interruption to your plans, but long experience in getting people out of tight places has made me wary of any unnecessary delay. Another thing. Have you anything to do—shopping, for instance—before you sail?"

"I am not sailing," I explained, "but I had planned to take the children into the New York shops and provide them with suitable clothing for the trip. They were brought from home with insufficient outfits because of the haste in getting them away."

Her face darkened as I spoke and when she replied her voice held crisp decision.

Another Shopping Tour.

"Mrs Graham, I do not wish to dictate to you, but Mrs Underwood has sent you to me, and expects me to put through the delicate business of getting you away from here. If I do it, I must have my own way—to speak plainly—about the movements of your party."

"Of course," I interposed hastily. "We have no other thought. I gather that you do not think it wise for the children to go to New York."

"Absolutely not," she returned. "They must not put their heads outside their rooms until they go. Now—can you not get all the things they need without them?"

With a memory of the clothing I so recently had bought for the children across the road from the farmhouse in order that their pretended flight might camouflage our real one, I reflected whimsically that when I finished with my present task I might set up a shopping bureau for distracted mothers. But aloud I only said gravely.

"Yes, I can provide everything needful in two or three hours' shopping."

Her eyes gave me their first approving look.

"Good!" she commented. "There's a garage man I know who is absolutely safe in anything of this kind—Mrs. Underwood used to employ him—and I'll send him a message to come over here right after luncheon and take you to the city. He'll stay right on the job, take you anywhere, wait for you as long as you like, and bring you back here when you have finished. If I were in your place, I would look up the sailing lists very carefully this afternoon. And don't worry, I shall be strictly on the job here until you come back."

FEMINISMS

WHAT A PHILOSOPHER WOULD CALL A STYLE REPERCUSSION.

MARGARET.—What a lark, Stella, to meet you here. And your hat, I can tell at a glance, came in the same shipment with mine. I think Mamselle has done as well by me as she has by you. And yours is lovely. Don't you think my little turned-up cloche is adorable? As for your sports hat, with its loops of colored straw, I think it is fascinating. Mamselle tells me that the hats are so small because skirts are getting shorter. Thus one style influences another.

YOUR HEALTH

Regard the Family Physician as Counselor and Guide

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

I HAD occasion to go to Cincinnati, Ohio, where a former Judge of the Court and his charming wife entertained me. My hostess was in mental distress over the high fever of one of her children who was suffering from an infected throat.

The next morning before I was dressed, the family doctor called. After seeing his little patient, the doctor came in to visit with me while I was shaving.

Do you remember old Doctor McClure in Ian Maclaren's book, "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush"? The doctor I met in Cincinnati was like Dr. McClure. He was a man of few words, but his voice was soft, his touch gentle, and his eyes kind. Poise, patience and wisdom were his wonderful possessions.

I hope the good, old family physician will never disappear from the earth. We need him now, just as our parents and our grandparents needed him.

I wish everybody could come to know what doctors are for. You shouldn't run to the doctor with every foolish little ache and pain. Your own common sense and honesty with self should teach you that many of these symptoms are the result of your own indiscretions. You know why you have them, how to avoid them, and that they will disappear in a few hours.

You should know enough about your body and how to care for it, to escape the frequent need of seeing a doctor.

Don't wear your doctor out by pestering him with needless telephone calls and the demand for midnight visits. Use your brains.

Many calls made upon the doctor are impulsive acts. I have told you of the old lady who 'phoned the doctor at 2 a. m., begging him to come at once. "I can't bear this pain another minute," she said. "How long have you had it?" inquired the kind doctor. "Twenty-seven years," was the amazing reply! Really, the suffering woman might have waited till daylight.

But there are just as many times when the doctor is really needed and is not called. I urge you to take no chance with disease or with symptoms which persist and cannot be explained. You should not permit yourself to worry or the disease to run past the curable stage, simply because your family doctor is neglected.

The doctor is your friend and should be your counsellor and guide. To have at your disposal a man like the Cincinnati doctor I have described is worth everything to your peace of mind and to the welfare of your family.

You may say a sore throat is not one of the ailments which demand the attention of a medical man. It all depends. Soreness alone is a matter of small consequence, but high fever with the soreness indicates infection. If neglected, a disturbance like this in a child may result in abscess of the glands and serious after effects. An extra call or two may be an unnecessary precaution, but the mental relief given the mother is worth more than the cost.

When I am sick I shall be happy to have the kind of doctor I saw in Cincinnati.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl twenty years old. I have gone with a young man for five years and love him very much.

He tells me I am the only one for him, but he insists upon calling upon a girl friend of mine once in a while. She tells me that he tells her the very same story, but I cannot believe her as he would do anything on earth for me, I am sure.

How can I find out whether he loves me? LITTLE BETTY.

LITTLE BETTY: Until this young man formally proposes, you should think of him only as a friend, my dear. You realize, of course, under these circumstances, it is his privilege to have as many friends as he chooses. Follow his example. Go out with other young men and do not devote too much thought to him. A proposal of marriage is the only real proof of love.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT A Shopping Tour

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

THERE was a homely old saying to the effect that you must Summer and Winter with any individual before you could say that you knew his real character.

Something on this line I thought, during the Christmas shopping, is true about a woman. You cannot know her until you have seen her on a shopping expedition.

It is said that more can be told of a man by watching him at his favorite game of cards than by years of ordinary dealing with him. His strength and his weakness come out over the card table; his honesty and his guile, his endurance and his lack of nerve, all these are shown.

The Time to See Human Nature

But for the feminine examination ordeal, give me the woman on a shopping tour. There you see all the cleverness, as well as the lack of it, all of the qualities you know and many you do not know, as the woman stands before the counter or sits in the seat of judgment in the shops and makes her decisions for the credit of her toilet or that of someone else for whom she is choosing.

Who has not been hitched, like a captive of old to the conquerors' car, while some dear friend took her shopping? If you like it there is balm in Gilead for you. But if you lack the bargaining instinct and the love of getting the best of the world of trade; if you find the shops dull and the clerks insipid; if you get hungry at the wrong time and pray for relief only to receive the icy answer, "Wait until I have made a choice, please," woe for you and me and all who detest the very name of a bargain!

I never knew that my neighbor had a drooping, vulpine nose until I went shopping with her and saw her in her might and majesty as a bargain hunter. Yet I was glad to reap the benefit of one of her purchases when she helped me to choose a tablecloth and some other linen for the household I am responsible for.

By a sort of inspiration she chose the best in the shop and made the sales people think they knew nothing about linen after all, and as for me, I was all admiration, only there was almost a fear of my clever neighbor, for all that.

She is something the same over the card table, but not with the aspect of an army with banners as she marches to the scene of her triumphs.

But a neighbor is nothing when compared to my maiden aunt from New Jersey. New York has been her school in the gentle art of shopping and a bargain is the sum and summit of her happiness.

To go out and buy what you need or want, that is not Aunt Jerusha's idea of shopping. She has to get the best and know she has got the best and have the salesman know it too in order to have a really successful shopping day.

And woe is me when I have to go with this peerless shopper. All day, with but a half hour for a cup of tea at one o'clock and miles of walking over the pavements of shops and of driving from place to place in search of something better, cheaper or more fashionable.

Dodging Aunt Jerusha

When Aunt Jerusha comes we all do our best to keep out of the way in order to be let off from the task of going with her on one of her tours of the city, a journey of discovery before she really begins her actual buying.

But one of us she always requires to go with her and the only comfort is if you go on the expedition of discovery you are excused from the secondary tour, when the goods are actually bought. So we take the turn about of fair play and our opinions of our New Jersey aunt are accordingly made.

And I will say that it is not the opinion of the Recording Angel who knows only all the good deeds.

If you must really know a woman, go shopping with her.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

By MARK STUYVESANT

The Charitable Woman Who Still Lives in Good Deeds.

"NOW there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this woman was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did."

This thirty-sixth verse of the Book of Acts in the New Testament is the introduction of the short story of a woman's life who through the centuries has been blessed and revered for the splendid example which she set.

For Dorcas was one of those characters who shed comfort and happiness on all those around her. She devoted her life to the poor. In her case it was not simply a matter of giving money or food to those in distress, for she clothed the poor and widows and orphans. And in so doing she made the garments with her own hands.

In the seven verses in which her life is related a most dramatic scene is described. Dorcas was dead. Her busy hands were quiet for the first time and great was the mourning in the room where she lay.

Suddenly Peter entered. Some friends had sent for the disciple. There lay Dorcas with many poor women around her weeping. When they saw Peter they each in turn showed him the garments which the kind Dorcas had made for them. Then followed the miracle which Peter performed in raising Dorcas from the dead.

This short story ends with the sentence commenting on her resurrection:

"And it was known throughout Joppa; and many believed in the Lord."

This episode occurred nearly two thousand years ago, but the force of this woman's character is still felt. Because all over the world since that time groups of women have met and sewed with their own hands making garments to cover the poor. And they have banded together under the name of the Dorcas Society.

Dorcas would necessarily have been loved and honored for the splendid life she led after her conversion to Christianity and for the real help she gave to others around her. But it would be interesting to know just how many of thousands of poor have been saved from suffering on account of the many women who have worked and sewed as a result of following the example of this noble woman of early Christian times. And so her name has come down to us with a double value—not only for her life but for the influence which that life exerted for centuries after her death.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Sees a Stunning Coat at a Musical Comedy.

GABY and I treated ourselves to a theatre party last night. We decided that we needed a diversion.

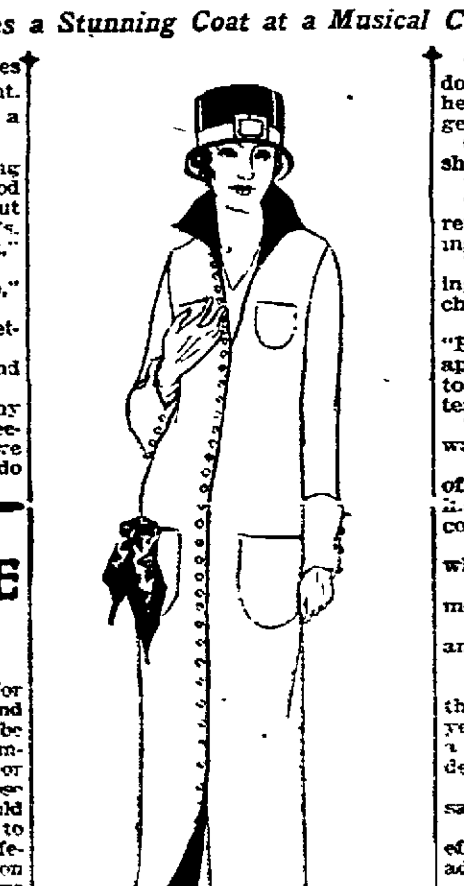

"There are times when nothing will serve quite the place of a good musical show," Gaby had said about 6 o'clock, just as we left Madame's. "I feel exactly like one to-night," she added. "Do you?"

"Well, I don't care if I do go," I replied.

"Let's," she said, and it was settled.

We went to Gaby's apartment and cooked dinner together.

"Sometimes I find cooking or any kind of domesticity most disagreeable," I remarked to Gaby as we prepared the salad. "But if you do it as a lark, it is a lot of fun."

This Yellow Wool Coat Has Touches of Black Satin to Set It Off.

"That's the trouble about taking domesticity on for good," I warned her. "It's fine at times, but it can get to be a bore, they tell me."

Gaby smiled. "Is that a warning?" she asked.

"Yes and no," I replied.

"You're being wilfully vague," she returned, stirring the French dressing at a great rate.

We found little difficulty in opening a can of peas and frying two chops.

"It's easy to cater for us," I said. "But I don't know about a masculine appetite. Doubtless one would have to prepare steak and potatoes oftener than convenient."

The few dishes were quickly washed, and we were on our way.

We settled down at the first rustle of the curtain, and were soon laughing delightedly at a very funny comedian.

"The clothes are stunning," Gaby whispered to me after the first act.

"Which costumes did you approve most?" I asked.

"I liked the yellow outfit," she answered.

"So did I," I agreed with her.

The scene had been Florida, and the costume a stunning long, deep yellow light wool coat, worn over a frock of the same shade in crepe de chine.

"I like the costume idea," Gaby said.

"That one was so simple, and so effective because it was simple," she added.

"I liked the little covered buttons all down the front, and the fact that the coat seemed to snap beneath them, so one wouldn't have to button them up every time," I said.

"And the black satin collar and facing that showed where the coat fastened," I added.

"And the tailored black hatter's plush hat," she whispered back, just as the curtain went up.

We were well pleased with the show, and decided we'd go to musical comedies oftener.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5.

The planetary configurations for this day point to annoyances and anxieties. The disposition may be restless and unsettled, but the impulse to make important change or to travel should be subdued. Those in the employment of others should be careful not to give offense to those in authority and should safeguard their positions. Speculation or any risk of money may prove hazardous. In domestic, social or affectional matters there may be annoyance.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of annoyance or anxiety. They should postpone important moves or journeys and should safeguard their positions if in the employment of others. Let not anxiety enter the domestic circle. A child born on this day will be fond of travel and adventure and may have a rather checkered career,

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Things to Know in Choosing Washable Hangings.

HANGINGS in the home are always necessary and are sometimes a problem to housewives who have no interior decorator to consult and are timid about using their own taste. They are often expensive and for that reason great care should be taken in their choice.

There are a few points, however, which, if known, will keep us from making too great mistakes. A neutral color in harmony with the decorations of the room is generally safe for hangings which are to veil an exposed arch that is doorless, cover a draughty window or door that opens onto a porch or sun parlor, cut off the length of a hallway or divide a large room.

The weight of the materials chosen must be governed by the place where the hangings are to be used. Fifty to sixty inches is the usual width of materials. Bordered materials may be secured, but plain goods will not disturb the harmony of the other decorations. Sometimes an exception to this rule is made in the instance of a rich Persian material, which is a decoration in itself and which, if well selected, will not kill any other colorings in the room.

Among the very newest and most practical cotton hangings is tan or natural-colored mummy cloth. The little open work line plaids are in half inch size and the edge of the material is finished with a narrow, plainly woven selvidge which looks like a hem and so is generally left on when the curtains are made up. This material is fifty-six inches wide. It is heavy and launders well. The material lends itself well to the popular worsted embroidery or cross-stitch motifs if the hangings are to be used for curtains.

Among crash hangings there are several versions of so-called "porch cloth" which has the natural ground color for a background with wide colored stripes. There is a half-inch black stripe placed on either side of an inch-wide gold, blue or red stripe. The triple stripes are about three inches apart. The weaving softens the colors and makes them very attractive. When this material is used in the sun-parlor, glassed-in porch or den, sofa cushions, bed or couch-throw and table-covers are made of the same material.

Stenciled borders on plain crash are among the stock hangings that can be purchased at moderate prices in Chinese blue, golden brown and willow green stenciling. The patterns are conventional arabesque figures spaced on stripes that are simple and effective. Here again the throws and table covers come to match.

Colors that are nonfadable in mercerized materials, cotton rep and other goods, with self-colored patterns like those of damasks, are popular especially where they are exposed to sunlight. These materials will wash if salt is added to luke warm water. White soap should be used. Rinse the material well and then allow it to drip dry in the shade instead of wringing it. The latter process breaks and twists threads and spoils the goods.

Close nap plush of good quality makes good hangings which wear especially well if the colors chosen do not fade. Old blue is good, for it simply seems to grow softer in coloring as it fades and it does not streak badly in the folds. Dark brown and very dark green are also good in this material.

If heavy silk goods appeal to the buyer, there is always one consolation in the fact that if they fade they can always be "dipped" and so made to look like new.

INTRIGUES TO GET SCRUTINY

EFFORTS ARE MADE TO KEEP M'LEAN OFF THE STAND.

Senators Believe If Loan to Fall Were Only Part, He Would Not Try So Hard to Keep Out.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Secret intrigues to keep E. B. McLean off the witness stand in the oil inquiry, will have a further airing today before the senate oil committee.

The committee got one step nearer the full inside story of the purpose of these intrigues when it called William J. Burns, head of the department of justice secret service to explain how McLean got possession of a code formerly used bu justice agents. Burns also was to be asked whether he sent word to McLean at Palm Beach that he was being investigated by the department.

Tho committee is interested in McLean's code messages and his unusual efforts to avoid testifying, because it believes this indicates that he knows more about the oil scandal than he has told. McLean himself will be put on the stand later in the week, and will be asked point blank why he tried so hard to keep out of the inquiry. All he has told about so far is a "loan" of $100,000 to Albert B. Fall, in the form of checks, which both McLean and Fall said, were never cashed. If that was McLean's only part in the matter he hardly would have expened such efforts to keep from telling about it, senators believe.

They do not disguise the fact that they do not completely believe the story of the $100,000 loan. Furthermore, information has been given committee members indicating that Fall did not use the $100,000 given him by Doheny to buy the New Mexico ranch where he now lives. They want to see if McLean can throw some further light on this.

SIDE TALKS

(By Ruth Cameron.)

Why Be Proud?

Is there anything stranger than the things people are ashamed of except. perhaps the things they are proud of?

Surely there is no more reasonable foundation for pride than to feel that one has been useful in the world. To know that one has done one's share of the world's work and perhaps even a little more would seem to be a reasonable source of pride. And to know that one has never done one's share but lived as a dead beat on the labor of others, that the world will be better off economically after one had been removed from it, would seem to be a source of shame and embarrassment.

She Could Have Done Much.

And yet who doesn't know women who are more proud of the fact that they never worked than of anything else? I recall one I know whose existence is a tragedy of large potentialities never used. They seem to have soured within her and produced a ferment of discontent that would hardly be possible in a less gifted woman. Yet the thing she is most proud of is that she has always subsisted on her small income rather than soil herself with contact with the world of women workers. And the things she is most ashamed of is that she did once consider working and even took some steps toward preparing herself to be useful.

She Feels Superior.

Another woman I know has just given up her home and gone to boarding because her maid left her for a two months' trip to Ireland. "I didn't want to get another maid for so short a time, so I thought I'd go to the Inn," she said. "I don't suppose you could possibly do the work for yourself and your husband for two months," teased a friend. "I should say not," she answered. "I never did any housework and I never mean to." It was plain she was proud of the record. She never did any other work either. As a girl she went to boarding school, lived at home a year or two, then married. She has had no children. You would think she would sometimes feel as if her life had counted for nothing. On the contrary, I know she regards herself as somehow superior to people who have had to work.

Another thing many people are proud of is the idea that they have a quick temper. An uncontrolled temper is something to be ashamed of, yet how often one hears people say with an unconscious smirk: I really have a very fiery temper. Perfectly uncontrollable.

Too Much Ego.

Super-sensitiveness is another thing to be ashamed of, because it is simply a form of egotism, yet people are generally pleased to be called sensitive. Indeed I believe that is one of the stock phrases the professional fortune teller uses on everyone.

To have such a sharp tongue that people are afraid of you hardly seems a reason for self-congratulation since it merely means that you are less controlled by the inhibition of decency and kindheartedness than other people. Yet I know people who have that reputation and who speak of it themselves, and laugh about it in a way that shows they are rather proud of it.

Truly there is nothing stranger than the things people are ashamed of except the things they are proud of.

DIGGING UP THE PAST

CAN YOUR TAXES BE CUT

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR.

CHAPTER IX.

Department of Justice—65c in $1,000.

The attorney general is the head of the department of justice. He is the chief law officer of the federal government. His duty is to see that all federal laws are enforced. The office has, from its organization in 1789, been considered of the very greatest importance. Edmund Randolph of Virginia, one of the greatest lawyers of his day, was the first to hold it. He was one of the five members in the first cabinet of George Washington. The suprme court of the United States has always been considered as a part of the department, at least so far as expenses are concerned.

The early records show that the first attorney general received $3,500 a year as salary: the chief justice of the United States received $4,000 while the associate justices each received $3,500 The average yearly expense of this department, including all expenses and salaries of the supreme court and other federal courts in the nation, cost the government a little less than $100,000 a year in the days of Randolph.

Now the business is tremendous in volume. New duties have been added to it thru the years. The department of justice has jurisdiction over all federal judges, all United States attorneys, all federal prisons. Its bureau of investigation has become very large and very powerful. The unit to enforce the prohibition laws, the custom laws, the drug act, and many others, is spending much time and money ferreting down violations of federal statutes.

What the Judges Cost.

Let us go into this a little closer. The whole integrity of the judicial system of the United States is bound up with the office of the attorney general. No office is more important. No man with a breath of suspicion attached to him should ever be appointed to this position. No politician should be appointed by the president. Its work is too important, too fundamental—I almost said sacred—to have stained by so much as a suspicion. His reputation for integrity must be unquestioned.

In the hands of the attorney general very largely rests the selection of the officers of the whole federal system of justice. The United States is so large, so vast, so bewildering in its very immensity, we little appreciate the power placed in the hands of such a man.

Today there are thirty-three federal circuit judges, each paid a salary of $8,500. They are appointed for life. There are five judges on the federal court of claims, each of whom receives $7,500 a year for life. There are 117 United States district court judges. They each receive $7,500 a year and have life appointments. Then there are eighty-eight United States district attorneys and the same number of United States marshals.

Over this permanent judicial organization, the attorney general has great influence and power. In addition to these important appointments which are largely controlled by the attorney general's office, he frequently appoints special counsel at great expense, in various places, to represent his office. In the annual report of the attorney general of the United States for the fiscal year 1923, there is a list of 131 special assistants to the district attorneys, appointed during the year 1923. Many are hired on an annual salary of from $3,000 to $6,000 a year and all expenses. These appointments are controlled by the attorney general.

To get an idea of this work, we find that at the close of the fiscal year 1923 there were more than 130,000 cases both civil and criminal, awaiting trial or decision in the federal courts of the land. These cases are amongst the most important in the land. They involve hundreds of millions of dollars. They involve the whole problem of defending democracy in the United States.

And now for the expenses of this department.

(1) For 1923 we find $660,000 was spent for salaries in the department of justice alone. This of course does not include any expenses or salaries of judges. We find that $734,000 was spent "for increase of compensation." This seems like a large item, but I find no explanation of the increase in any of the 426 pages of the last report of the attorney general.

Again, there was spent for the fiscal year 1923 a total of $450,000 for "investigation and prosecution of war frauds." The attorney general in the 1923 report says that he is in direct charge of this war fraud's work and expects to get results. Little so far has been accomplished. He says tho that "hundreds of cases now under investigation and many proceedings of a civil and criminal character, ready to be instituted, are not referred to in this report."

Another item is $42,000 for printing and bonding, and $360,000 for "miscellaneous items."

Then the big item of the department of justice. Listen! For 1923, a total of $2,087,000 was spent for "detection and prosecution of crimes." This item is increased for 1924 by approximately $150,000. This is a huge sum. In the present order of things it is kept more or less secret. The attorney general is given wide latitude in spending this money. It can be made a source of much evil. There has been much criticism in the uses to which this fund in recent years has been directed.

So much for the department of justice's current expenses. They totalled $4,335,000 in 1923, and will be increased by approximately $400,000 in 1924.

(2) Taking up the salaries of all federal judges, including those of the United States supreme court, a total of $1,687,000 was spent in 1923. This is expected to be increased approximately $300,000 in 1924. Chief Justice Taft now receives $15,000 a year salary, whereas, as president of the United States, he received $75,000 a year Expenses of all the federal courts in the United States, including judges' salaries, fees of jurors, witnesses, bailiffs, salaries of attorneys and marshals, came fairly high. The total was approximately $13,000,000.

For the care of all federal prisoners and the operation of, and maintenance of, federal penitentiaries, approximately $3,100,000 must be added. In the new plan of government reorganization, the supervision of the federal prisons is taken from this department.

The balance of the expenses can be covered under that mysterious term, at times a very useful one, of "miscellaneous items."

Altogether then, the department of justice, for the fiscal year which closed June 30, 1923, had 653 persons employed in Washington and 2,700 outside Washington, a total of 3,553. This is an increase of 74? persons over the number employed in the work in 1916.

The department of justice spent approximately $21,527,000 for the year. But this department also collected some revenue, mostly from federal fines, penalties and forfeitures. The total was $6,925,000. So the net expenditures for 1923 were approximately $14,600,000.

Equals Eighteen Days of Navy.

Here is a system which covers like a fine tooth comb the whole United States. It operates extensively in every state in the union and in the foreign possessions of the United States. In these expenses are included the salaries of every federal judge from the nine men on the United States supreme court, down: all attorneys, bailiffs, witnesses—everybody connected with the judicial part of the government. It has hundreds of plain clothes detectives everywhere, under the eagle eye of William J. Burns, who receives $7,500 a year salary from the department. These men are amongst the best paid in any department of government.

Yet out of every $1,000 the people of the United States paid into the United States treasury in taxes in 1923, the department of justice received only 65 cents. It is less than is given General Hines every twelve days to carry on the veterans' bureau. It is less than the American people gave to Mr. Denby every eighteen days to spend on his navy. Some reduction in expenditures can be made in this department—probably a considerable amount out of that $2,000,000 secret fund—but the great expenditures of this government of the United States are not in the department of justice. We must look elsewhere for our big cuts.

WALT MASON

Lenine.

And now that Lenine's in his grave, I ask these questions quaint: Was he a hero or a knave, a satyr or a saint? The human puzzle lies asleep; so strange is his renown, I know not whether I should weep or kick his headstone down. I read one book with covers green which proves that he was great, the greatest man the world has seen since Caesar pulled his freight; he played a high and noble part, with virtue still in mind; he had a fond and yearning heart that loved all humankind. I read a book with covers red which claims he was a wretch; the one regret, since he is dead, is that he dodged Jack Ketch. With other sinful, heartless gents he played the butcher's game, and in the blood of innocents he wallowed to his fame. I wonder should I hang a wreath upon his headstone brown, or undermine the dirt beneath, and let the blame thing down. Oh, should I sing his praises now, exalt the good and brave, or bring along my bob-tailed cow, and stake her on his grave? We'll have to wait for many years before we can decide if he deserves regretful tears or curses deep and wide. We'll have to see dark Russia rise, or sink to lower deeps, before we call this Lenine wise, or damn his name for keeps.

THE FRANC IS WEAKENING

Sell at 24.10 to Dollar—Blamed by French Authority to World Wide Speculation.

PARIS, March 4.—The French franc continued to weaken today, with the dollar at 24.10 and the pound sterling 105.50.

A government financial authority told the United Press the continued fall of the franc was due to world wide speculation.

"Many are selling short of francs. They are likely to experience heavy losses soon." he said.

Oother financiers claim the latest slump is due to the month end need of industrialists for foreign currency.

Before noon the franc had fallen to a new low record, 24.75 to the dollar, 106.30 to the pound.

MAKE FINAL TALLY OF STORM LOSSES

Enough Poles Lost to Build a Complete Line the Distance Between Lincoln and Kansas City.

Enough poles were broken and destroyed in the February sleet storm in the Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph company's territory to build a complete line from Lincoln to Kansas City. The total destroyed was 9,100 in round numbers.

Enough wire was blown down, broken and twisted by the same storm to furnish enough material to build a circuit of two wires from Portland, Me., to San Diego, Cal.

These are the figures prepared by M. T. Caster, plant superintendent, who has just finished making up his final estimate of loss, after having devoted the energies of himself and a specially trained organization to handle such emergencies to restoring service. Toll lines were nearly all working again inside of seven days and local service was completely available in from ten to fourteen days. Two weeks found the entire system reconstructed and working.

"If you want another comparison, take this: The money loss was $100,000, or enough to build and equip a dozen small town exchanges. It was our second storm in four weeks. The first one, January 9, took down 3,000 poles, sufficient to build a pole line from here to Harvard, and enough wire to stretch between Denver and Boston.

"These figures will give telephone patrons an idea of the herculean job it is to build a pole line of that length and string the necessary number of wires, even in good weather. Carried out as it was in twenty below zero weather, with roads impassable and men unable to stand exposure but a brief time at each attempt to work, it took real heroism and courage.'

The Calendar.

Chicago News: "I wonder," said the cheerful little wife, "if you remember what day this is?"

The contended husband wrinkled his brow in thought. Then his face cleared. "Of course, it's your birthday. Did you think I'd forget it? Tonight, when I get home, I'll have a surprise for you."

"Now don't be foolish and buy me a birthday present six months ahead of time," she said. "Guess again."

He looked at her despondently. "Thing I'll have to give it up," he said.

His wife shook her fingers in his face. "What happened five years ago?"

"Let's see," he replied, sparring for time. "Oh I remember now, that was the day Aunt Milly came to visit us and we had such a time entertaining her."

"Really, I'm discouraged" she said. "I don't think you love me or you wouldn't forget our wedding anniversary."

He looked properly repentant and then a calendar on the wall caught his eye. "Today's the third, my dear," he said, "Tomorrow we celebrate. You are a little ahead of time."

"But you would have forgotten it just the same," she said as she verified the date.

Loudly asserting he would never do such a thing under any circumstances, and inwardly blessing the friendly calendar, the contented husband departed for his office.

After he had gone the cheerful little wife grew thoughtful. "How could I have made such a mistake in the date?" she mused. Again she inspected the calendar on the wall. "Why, it's a last year's calendar," she declared. "Today is the fourth after all. I remember, now, I hung that old calendar up on the wall because I thought the picture on it was out of date. Just wait until that husband of mine reaches home tonight."

A little later the telephone bell tinkled. It was the contended husband. "Say, dear," h esaid. "I have tickets for a show this evening. Come down and meet me and we'll have dinner."

"So you found out this is the fourth, after all?" she said.

"Yes," he replied, cheerfully, "but I didn't know you were in the habit of hanging prehistoric calendars about the house, or I'd be more careful."

"There's nothing like a good alibi,"

BACK TO THE CORSET.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Back to the corset, Prof. Moni, teacher of dress design at the Chicago academy of fine arts, advised today.

Corsets may not be vogue but they keep waists slim, he said. If American women discontinue corsets altogether, the typical American figure will change from slender gracefulness to thick-waisted obesity, he warned.

JAIL CUTS TRAFFIC DEATHS.

CLEVELAND, (By mail.)—Jail sentences have materially cut down traffic deaths in Cleveland, according to figures just announced by Judge Alva Corlett, of traffic court. "When workhouse sentences were added to fines, arrests decreased 90 per cent in ten days," Judge Corlett said "From Jan. 1, 1922, to July 1, 1922, when there was strict enforcement, there were forty-eight deaths against eighty-eight for the previous six months. During the two months ending Jan. 25, 1924, while heavy jail sentences were being imposed, deaths decreased from forty-five to twenty-five," he said

Tournament Entry List Shows Increase Over 1923

105 MORE NAMES ON LIST OF ATHLETES

Practice by Early Arirvals Barred Under Rulings of Committee in Charge—To Broadcast Results.

In line with an increase in everything else, the number of athletes competing in the state tournament this year is larger than ever, Manager H. D. Gish announced Tuesday. Last year there were 2,009 names on the entry list. This year there are a total of 2,114 high school boys listed as contestants which is an increase of 105.

In order that all teams start with an equal chance it was decided by those in charge of the tournament not to permit the early arrivals practice periods on the floors where they will compete.

Another matter which has caused some confusion is the invitation sent to all high schools to attend the Drake-Nebraska game Wednesday night. Most of the schools, judging from the tenor of letters received by Manager Gish, are under the impression that they will have to have tickets. All that is necessary, Gish stated, is that the coach report with his team at the gate and both players and coach will be admitted.

The university radio station will broadcast results of the tournament at 9:45 and 12:40 a. m.; 3, 6, 8, 9, 10 and 11 p. m. At 11 p. m. a grand summary of the day's play will be given.

The university station is WFAV, and its wave length is 275 metres.

HUSKER CAGE FIVE TRIMS AMES QUINT

Coach Kline's Men Grab Early Lead and Never Headed—Cozier and Captain Usher Star for Winners.

BY DOBIE.

Coach Kline's Husker basket tossers dribbled and passed thru the Ames defense for a 27 to 14 victory over the Iowa crew, in a battle waged on the coliseum court Monday night. The game was rough in spots but the Nebraska goal shooters led all the way, holding a 14 to 9 advantage at half way time.

Captain Usher put his mates in the lead with two free tosses shortly after the battle got under way. Jacobsen, lanky Ames center, scored first for the Iowa State quint with a free throw. Three goals by Cozier gave the Huskers a comfortable lead but long baskets by Roberts and Fisher cut down the Nebraska advantage as the first stanza closed.

Nebraska took the offensive again in the second period and goals by Goodson and Usher put the Huskers ahead, 21 to 11. The entire Nebraska second team was sent in at the close of both the first and second halves.

Cozier High Point Man.

Cozier was the high point man for the winners with four field counters. The star Husker forward was shooting them in from all angles; one of his shots was a neat one-handed toss from the sidelines. Captain Usher followed with a pair of goals and three free throws for seven tallies.

J. Behm and Jacobsen divided the scoring for the Iowa Staters with four points each. Fisher starred on the defensive for the losers while Tipton and Volz, Husker guards, kep the Ames forwards from running wild.

Nebraska will play Drake at the coliseum Wednesday night. All visiting high school teams have been invited to witness the fray. Monday night's score:

WHAT MADE GREAT BALL PLAYERS GREAT

BY BOZEMAN BULGER

No. 9—Edward J. Delehanty.

Hitting Ability Made Him One of Greatest in the Game—Hit Four Homers in One Contest.

In the summer of 1891 baseball people began to hear weird stories coming out of Wheeling, W. Va., about a remarkable young fellow by the name of Delehanty. They were just as skeptical then as we are now over tales of the super-hitters in the sticks.

"There isn't a ball park in the world big enough to hold his wallops," a shoe drummer, in coming back to Philadelphia, related to the manager of the Phillies. "After you see him, all these other hitters will make you laugh. He kills 'em!"

That sort of stuff had been heard before. It was regarded as fiction. But the noise over this Delehanty kept growing. Finally it was decided to send a scout down there just to be on the safe side. He came back a pronounced Delehanty convert.

"I saw that boy hit three of them out of the park in one afternoon," he declared.

"Can he place his hits?" was asked.

"Place 'em? This fellow doesn't have to place 'em," the scout insisted. "If an infielder gets in front of one that boy simply knocks his legs out from under him and goes on."

As a result of this glowing report from an experienced scout the Philadelphia club paid Wheeling $1,900 for the release of the batting wonder. That was a lot of money in those days—said to be the highest price ever paid to a minor league club in cash for a ball player.

That Delehanty was also a great outfielder was entirely secondary. In the marvel at his hitting the fielding seemed to be overlooked. It was inconceivable that any big league club could step right out and pick up a finished star. That, however, is exactly what developed. Delehanty led all the outfielders one year.

Ed Delehanty walked into the big league in the spring of 1892 and was even a better hitter among the major stars than he was among the minors. His first year gave him a batting record of .312. And—think this over—that was the lowest hitting average he ever had in the twelve years he played in big league! He once hit .409.

Delehanty was a powerfully built raw-boned type of man, with light hair, blue eyes and freckled. He hadn't the bulk of a man like Ruth, for instance. Physically he was more the type of an Arthur Devlin or the Meusel boys.

It was an inborn knack Ed had of timing his swing so that his whole strength went into the ball as he pivoted on the ball of his left foot that made him a genius. He had a perfect eye, like that of Ruth or Cobb. Delehanty never seemed to care where he hit the ball. He simply hit it hard, and the mere force of it would carry thru. His low grounders would literally knock the legs out from under the infielders. Pitchers were always afraid of being hit by a ball hit back at them. When Delehanty hit that ball it whistled.

In less than two years from the time the Phillies made that deal with Wheeling, Ed Delehanty was regarded as the hitting wonder of the age. And, believe us, he had some competition. On the team with him were Lajoie, Hamilton, Flick and Cooley. A pitcher having to face that sort of artillery today would stop and ponder. They didn't have a lively ball then. Still, that outfit batted for an average of more than .330.

One season Delehanty, with a batting average of .377, scored 110 runs in 129 games.

The climax of Delehanty's greatness came in 1896 when he made a record that still holds the spotlight in batting history.

The Phillies were in a hard series with the Brooklyn team, and Brooklyn trotted out Pitcher Terry to spike the guns of the opposing heavy artillery.

"I'm feeling pretty good today, Larry," Big Ed Delehanty said to Lajoie, who often narrates the incident. "Let's take that fellow."

Beginning with a single, Big Ed warmed up, and before the game was over had hit Terry for four home runs in addition. For the afternoon he had a total of seventeen bases out of five times at bat!

These were not trick home runs, either. Every one was a sock squarely on the nose. There has been some discussion as to whether Delehanty could hit a ball harder than Babe Ruth.

"I don't believe anybody could drive a ball as far as Ruth," Dan Brouthers told me last summer, "but you can bet that Delehanty could hit 'em harder than anybody else."

For twelve years Delehanty had a batting average of .367.

Big Ed came from a baseball family. His three brothers—Jim, Joe and Frank—were all big leaguers, but none quite so good as Ed. He was the genius.

Delehanty's reign as king of the batters was not so long as seems to be the impression. He played but twelve years. Poor Ed was cut down in the height of his greatness. He played part of his least season in 1903 with the Washington club of the American league.

While on a train crossing the bridge at Niagara Falls Delehanty accidentally fell off and was killed.

Thus passed from baseball the greatest natural hitter and the longest driver up to the time of Babe Ruth. Old ball players still shake their heads and wonder what Delehanty would have done to this lively ball.

Tomorrow—Bill Donovan.

If Lightweight Champion Wants to Make Real Money This Summer He Must Move Out of His Class.

NEW YORK, March 3. — Benny Leonard, if he wants to make any real money in the ring this summer, will have to move out of his class and meet Mickey Walker for the welterweight championship.

Leonard is positively without an opponent in the lightweight class who would more than fill Madison Square Garden, let alone one that would be a card for a big outdoor show.

Johnny Dundee spoiled the chances of Pal Moran, the New Orleans lightweight, just when it looked as if Moran could be built up into a real challenger.

Dundee insists that Leonard is afraid to fight him, but it will not be proved on Leonard, because no promoter is going to try to stage such a bout.

Rocky Kansas was held to a draw recently by Jack Bernstein, a junior lightweight. Richie Mitchell is thru. Lew Tendler is thru. Charley White is thru, and Sailor Friedman is out of it.

Bernstein might be built up into a match for the title, but it can't be done in time for a big bout this summer and it may never be done, because Bernstein is such an uninteresting performer.

Leonard could make some money by fighting Mickey Walker, but, if the smart fans are not wrong, he would make a mistake in fighting him.

Jack Britton, from whom Walker took the championship, said recently that he would bet a lot of money that Walker stops Leonard if they ever meet. Harry Greb is another one of the boxers who figures that Walker is too rugged and can punch too hard for the lightweight champion.

Leonard, of course, would have nothing but his reputation to lose in a fight with Walker, but his record is an asset in his theatrical enterprises and he is somewhat proud of that.

Greb, who is fighting in California, recently expressed the opinion that Tommy Gibbons is a better fighter than Jack Dempsey, and that Gibbons will stay the limit again with the champion if they meet in a return bout.

Greb then admitted that he was a better fighter than Gibbons.

While he reached his point in a roundabout way, Greb has always maintained that he could beat Dempsey in a real fight.

"Dempsey has refused many offers to meet me," Greb said. "He knows I can whip him."

Greb expressed the opinion that Wills would give Dempsey the hardest fight of any of the challengers and that the champion could name the round and the punch with Firpo.

CHILEAN FIGHTER GIVEN AN OVATION

SANTIAGO, March 4.—Quentin Romero, Chilean heavyweight champion, who sails on March 15 for the United States was given a public ovation when he arrived here last night from Buenos Aires.

More than 10,000 persons crowded around the railroad station to greet the champion. When demands were made for a speech, Romero thanked his friends for the demonstration and said he could not control his emotions long enough to continue.

the western open championship at the Calumet country club here.

St. Paul—Joe Barndy's St. Thomas basketball five bewildered the Columbia college quintet of Dubuque last night and won easily 30 to 9.

Dempsey Not Over Effects of Knife

NEW YORK, March 4. — Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will be discharged from the hospital today after a final examination by Dr. Robert Brennan, who operated on him last Wednesday, according to Jack Kearns, the champion's manager.

Dempsey is not completely recovered from the operation and will have to remain at his hotel here for several days before he can leave for California.

Kearns is expected to sign articles in a few days for a return bout with Tommy Gibbons after which Dempsey was to do another turn on the stage before he goes into training for the bout.

KANSAS TEAM IS WINNER.

NEBRASKA CITY, March 6.—Hiawatha, Kas., defeated Nebraska City at basketball 10 to 5 on the local floor. Hardick, Nebraska City's whirlwind guard, was out of the game because of illness. Hiawatha's defensive playing was one of the features of the game.

And Still More Rumors.

Detroit News: Here it is again—the perennial Chaplin romance rumor.

For the sixth time in a couple of years the comedian is believed to be "interested" in a prospective mate.

Estelle Taylor, whose latest screen prominence was in Cecil DeMille's "Ten Commandments," is the object of the gossip in Hollywood.

Miss Taylor follows Claire Windsor, Mae Collins, Claire Sheridan, the English writer and sculptor; Pola Negri and Peggy Joyce in the line of succession.

In some of these friendships the eager curiosity of the public has been justified.

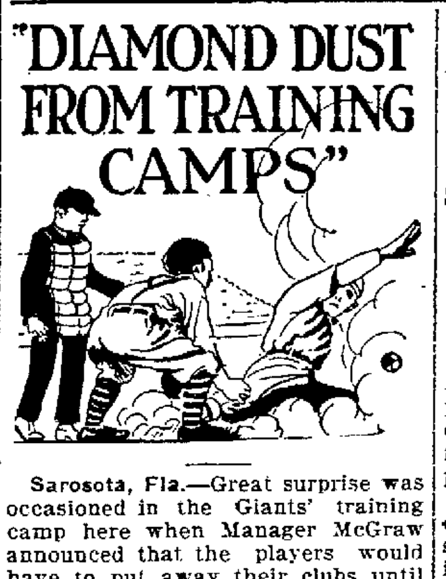

Miss Taylor and Charlie, say mutual friends, have of late been observed together in quiet corners of leading Hollywood cafes.

The lady has also, it is rumored, received other significant attentions from the comedian.

Miss Taylor is one of the recognized beauties of movieland.

Until recently she was supposed to be first in the favor of the stalwart George Walsh.

"DIAMOND DUST FROM TRAINING CAMPS"

Sarosota, Fla.—Great surprise was occasioned in the Giants' training camp here when Manager McGraw announced that the players would have to put away their clubs until the close of the coming season. McGraw said he has found that golf and baseball did not mix well. Pep Young, who arrived yesterday is expected to sign a contract today.

New Orleans—Holdouts, who have been bothering the New York Yankees in large numbers, have been ordered to report to Manager Miller Huggins at the training camp here to talk terms. Huggins said he had the most promising bunch of recruits here he had ever seen.

Catalina Island, Cal.—First test of new material will be made by Manager Killefer next week when he has scheduled a game, the first of a spring exhibition series, with a Vernon team.

Winter Haven, Fla.—The White Sox in training here have settled down to a routine of hard work under direction of Johnny Evers who is substituting for Manager Frank Chance. Strenuous road work to take off surplus weight is part of the program.

Bradentown, Fla.—Roy Boyd, rookie pitcher from Fort Smith, Ark., was given transportation home when Manager Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals arrived and found some of the rookies in bad with local authorities. Rickey fined or reprimanded four others. Rickey has placed charges against the man supposed to have furnished the inspiration. "No rowdyism" is Rickey's rule.

Griffith Says His Managers Are Power

When Buck Harris was appointed manager of the Washington Senators the mourners' bench had a few sad words for him. It is the belief around the American league circuit that no manager can succeed in Washington, because Clark Griffith interferes too much.

Griffith resents this intimation, and as proof of his claim that he lets his manager go it "on his own," he asks that any of the managers who served previously under him be questioned about it.

The boss of the club said recently that he released Donie Bush, after Bush had landed the team in the first division last year because Bush had failed to give any of the young players on the club a chance to break into the game.

"I will give Harris absolute charge of the club, as I have always given my managers," Griffith said.

If Griffith gives Harris the same thing that he has given all his other managers, it will be the "air" for Stanley next fall.

Hudkins to Scrap With Jack O'Toole

Ace Hudkins, champion lightweight of Nebraska, has been matched with Jack O'Tool, Sioux City battler, in a ten round semi-windup at the Elks St. Patrick's day show in Omaha, March 17. Harry Reed, the Lincoln leather pusher's manager announced Monday night.

Hudkins, one of the best in his weight in the middle west, recently knocked out Rusty Jones of St. Paul in the second round of a scheduled ten hound go at the metropolis. Jones had a record of thirteen straight kayos until he bumped against the local scrapper.

Sammy Mandell and Joe Seiger, lightweights, are on the main card in the Elks show while Earl McArthur, Sioux City and Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, are slated in the prelims. Rusty Evans and Joe Humphrey will exchange fists in the opening tilt.

The first annual open amateur boxing meet of the Lincoln Hi Y federation will be held March 11 in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The eight boxers who will represent the Lincoln Hi Y club are not yet definitely decided upon, but they will be selected by O. B. Anderson, "Y" athletic instructor, from a squad of fourteen members. This squad met in the Y. M. C. A. boxing room of the gymnasium Monday evening. The bouts in the meet will be decided by decision entirely, and will last ten minutes. The weights range thru eight classes from 108 pounds and under to 175 and over. The contest is under the direction of John Fuhrer, Y. M. C. A. physical director.

Gary, Ind.—Annual boxing championships of the middle states association of the A. A. U. will be held in the Y. M. C. A. here March 13, 14 and 15 with competition in eight classes.

Boys Under Twelve Will Go In Free

Howard Wakefield, Lincoln's Western league manager, is planning on something which will give every boy in Lincoln under twelve an opportunity to "sit in" on all week-day Western league games free.

There are all sorts of "Knot-hole" clubs over the country but usually the members are admitted only one or two days a week. As far as is known Wakefield's plan is the only one where every day the gates will be opened to the members.

"I've got three tots of my own. Maybe that's why I'm so anxious to please the youngsters," Wakefield said.

He is also figuring on a reduced fare to women fans.

Morris Knocks Out Socklyn in Seventh

NORFOLK, Neb., March 4.—Eddie Morris, Sioux City, Ia., knocked out Sidney Socklyn, Lincoln, in the seventh round of a scheduled ten round bout here Friday night. Monte Munn, Lincoln, refereed. The Lincoln fighter was in distress from the fifth round on.

Clark Conners, Sioux City lightweight, knocked out Kid Frankie Freeman, Norfolk, in the first round of a scheduled four round preliminary. Morrie Schlaiffer, Omaha welterweight, was introduced as the challanger for the world's welterweight championship. He was in Morris' corner.

A. B. C. Leaders Get Another Jolting

CHICAGO, March 4.—Leaders in the five-man event of the American Bowling congress tourney here were given a scare when the P. L. Wethe Garfields, Chicago, hit the maples for within four pins of first place.

With a total count of 2,854 they jumped into second place. The Anderson Tobacco five continued to hold down the top berth with 2,857. This places the Goldammer Flitch company five in third place and the Shorty Dugouts of Madison, Wis., in fourth.

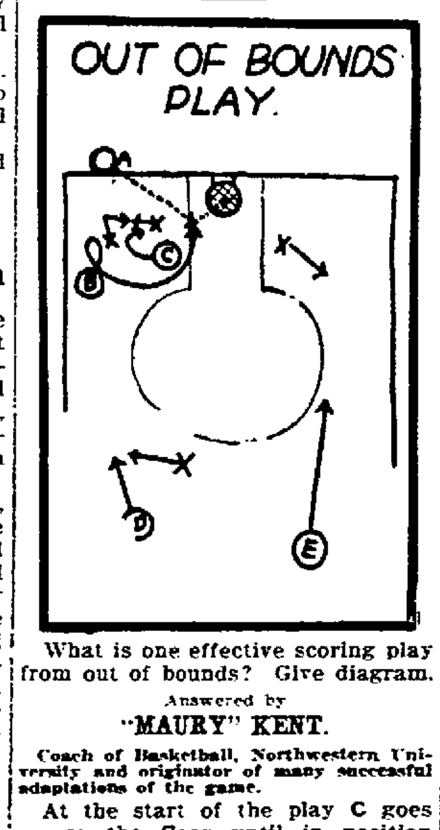

Rebock and Furrow, Springfield, Ill., slipped into third place with a score of 1,222 in the doubles while the singles star was Simmons of Des Moines who hit the pins for 654 and eighth place in the singles.

LITTLE LESSONS IN Basketball

Answered by

"MAURY" KENT.

Coach of Basketball, Northwestern University and originator of many successful adaptations of the game.

At the start of the play C goes across the floor until in position between B's opponent and basket, then stops, turns towards basket, spraddles out and holds position. At start of play B bluffs in a step to get opponent to back up, then pivots around back of C and C's opponent in a half circle towards basket where he should be free for shot, as his opponent will be blocked off by C and C's opponent.

A fakes a pass until B is free for shot at basket and then hooks ball in to B. If play is not going through successfully, A always passing in long to D or E, guards D and E come in for shot so as to engage remaining two opponents. As a check on the above play, work the same, only the other way, C pivoting around B to outside of floor for shot at basket.

Speed Boat Races Off Miami Beach

MIAMI, Fla., March 3.—Preparations are practically complete for the speed boat regatta, March 7 and 8. C. F. Chapman, secretary of the American power boat association, in announcing the list of entrants reveals the fact that Gar Wood of Detroit will not compete this season. His physicians have ordered him not to race.

The sweepstakes (liberty class) call for open displacement boats of over twenty-five feet in length, equipped with motors of not more than 1,350 cubic inches, and displacement vessels of more than thirty-two feet in length, with not more than 1,650 cubic inches displacement. A qualifying speed of forty miles an hour is required.

In the gentlemen's runabout race boats having open displacement of more than twenty-five feet in length, equipped with motors of not more than 825 cubic inches and making a qualifying speed of thirty-five miles an hour, may enter.

Olympic Exectiive Committee to Name Coaches for America's Team

BY HENRY L. FARRELL.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Appointment of the board of coaches that will train and handle the American Olympic team will be one of the chief items of business before the executive committee of the American Olympic committee when it meets here Thursday.

Lawson Robertson, track coach at the University of Pennsylvania, has been recommended by the A. A. U. for head coach of the team.

Must Be Head Coach.

As soon as Robertson is named, it is understood Jack Moakley, Cornell coach and the head coach of the 1922 Olympic team will announce that he will not accept an appointment as an assistant coach.

Moakley recently told a Boston paper he could not accept any appointment other than that of head coach.

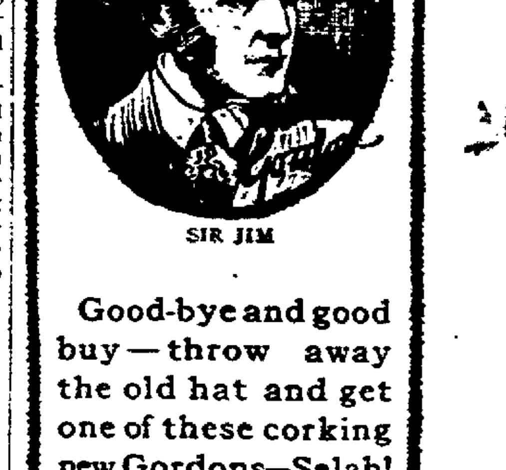

Moakley has the support of a large number of colleges if he wants to make a fight for the job but Robertson is favored by the influential clubs.

Seventeen leading coaches were recommended for the staff at the annual meeting of the A. A. U. but Colonel Robert M. Thompson, president of the Olympic committee, made known at the last meeting that the list would have to be trimmed to a skeleton to save expenses.

To State Paddock Status.

It is considered certain now that the announcement will be made at the meeting that Charley Paddock, world's champion sprinter, has been reinstated by the A. A. U. and that he is eligible to enter the trials that will decide the personnel of the team.

The committee also will be asked to approve a final card of professional boxing bouts that has been tentatively arranged for March 19 in the Garden to be staged as a benefit for the Olympic fund

REFUSES LICENSES TO FOUR COMPANIES

Installment Investment Concerns, Home and Foreign, Turned Down by Department of Trade and Commerce.

Secretary Knudson of the state department of trade and commerce has refused licenses to four installment investment companies within the last sixty days. The fourth company was refused a license Tuesday. It has headquarters in Kansas City. The others turned down hail from North Platte, Neb., Des Moines and Hastings, Neb. Mr. Knudson was made defendant in an injunction suit on Monday by the Investors Syndicate of Minneapolis whose annual license expired in January. This is the only installment investment company ever licensed in this state under a statute more than twenty years old. The companies applying all have practically the same plan of doing business.

Referring to the Kansas City company which he refused to license Mr Knudson, said:

"Their plan or scheme was to issue an installment certificate costing $74.00 per year. They employ an agent who receives $45.00 of this as his commission for selling this certificate. Unless the customer continues to make these yearly payments for two years, the customer loses all his money. After two years the certificate has a usrrender value of $78.00 and not until the end of six years has the certificate grown into the value equal to the six annual payments of $74.00 each. And not until the end of ten years does the certificate equal the ten yearly payments with a compound interest of 5 per cent. Very unlike savings accounts in banks or building and lian stock where a customer can withdraw his money any time or upon thirty days' notice, the customer of this investment company cannot withdraw any part of his monthly or yearly payments during the first two years.

"This same investment company issues printed matter advertising savings and upon investigation by Mr. Knudson of this company at places where they do business, he finds that this kind of business is obtained to a great extent by being represented as a savings similar to banks and building and loan associations, and in a number of instances the customers have made investments under the delusion that they could get their money back any time they wanted it."

WILL OF MRS. PADDOCK

The will of the late Emma L. Paddock who died Dec. 16, 1923, was filed for probate in the county court Tuesday morning. The value of the estate is estimated at $61,000. One thousand is personal property located in Lancaster county and the remainder real estate in Idaho.

Under the terms of the will the entire estate is to be divided between her two children. Harriet Alden Coliman a daughter living in Lincoln is to receive two-thirds, and Franklin Algernon Paddock, a son living in Kansas City, receives one-third. The two children are made joint executors of the estate. The will was made Nov. 15, 1922.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Helen Tiffany.

Helen Van Buren was born on a farm near Victoria, Knox county, Ill., November 25, 1846, and died at her home near Bennett, Neb., February 21, 1924, at the age of 77 years 2 months 27 days.

She was married to Novatus B. Tiffany, February 23, 1865, in the house where she was born and reared.

Funeral services were held at the home Saturday, February 23, the fifty-ninth anniversary of their wedding day, and burial was in beautiful Wyuka cemetery, Lincoln.

Rev. Mr. Hollingsworth of the Tabernacle Christian church, Lincoln, had charge of the service. Music was furnished by the Genuchi quartet. The selections were, "It Is Well With My Soul," "Somewhere the Sun Is Shining," and The Haven of Rest."

To this union was born one daughter, Mrs. Carrie Whyman, who has made her home with her parents since the death of her husband in 1910.

Casket bearers were Andy Kinnison, Charlie Genuchi, Ira Deats, O. K. Deats, Howard and Charlie Mouk.

Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany came to Nebraska in March, 1880, settling on a farm near Filley, Neb. From there they moved to Johnson county, near Elk creek. The west seemed to call them, so in the spring of 1886 they moved on a farm near Beaver City, Furnas county, where for thirteen years they endured drouth, hot winds and crop failures like all pioneers. In 1899 they moved to their present home, two and one-half miles northwest of Bennett, Neb.

Mrs. Tiffany was a firm believer in the doctrines of Christianity and was a member of the Church of Christ, also a charter member of the Carnation chapter, Order of Eastern Star.

Mrs. Tiffany was of a genial, pleasant disposition, with a friendly word for everyone, and will be greatly missed in the community. Were everyone for whom she did some loving service to bring a blossom to her grave she would sleep tonight beneath a wilderness of flowers.

Death came to her peacefully after an illness of several weeks. She had been subject to attacks of asthma from time to time for many years. Her last attack seemed more serious and complications induced by her age proved too severe a strain for the threat of life.

Besides her husband and daughter she is survived by one sister, Mrs. Martha Herold, Hamilton, Mo., and a host of friends to mourn her death.

Hard Life for the Thirsty.

FREMONT, Neb., March 4.—Eddie Bowman, of nowhere in particular, arrived in Fremont with a terrific thirst for that beverage barred by the eighteenth amendment. He lost no time in starting the campaign to allay that craving. Approaching the first persons he happened to meet, Eddie rushed up with a smile on his face and a plea on his lips. And then Eddie got "something with a kick in it" when he saw his name inscribed on the police station blotter and indexed as a vagrant. Now Officers Brenner and Lowry are wondering whether they are beginning to look like bootleggers after hunting them down these past few years.

SHE MARRIED ATHLETE FROM RIVAL COLLEGE.

It has just leaked out in San Francisco that Miss Janice Manning, of Riverside, Cal., senior at the University of California, slipped away Thanksgiving Day to Santa Cruz and secretly married Normal Dole, Leland Stanford University track and football star. She is finishing her education at the University of California, while Dole continues his studies at Stanford, where he is a junior.

THE TRUE STORY OF WOODROW WILSON

BY DAVID LAWRENCE.

CHAPTER VIII.

In the entire eight years of the Wilson regime not a single individual was ever invited to the white house to luncheon or dinner for the purpose of exercising a political influence upon him. This was true both as to Mr. Wilson and every member of his family. Few people in official and political life were there at all en famille. This is hard to realize but it is true. There were scores of cases when an invitation to a senator or representative or to the wives of members of congress, for family dinner at the white house might have gained for Mr. Wilson the support of certain influential leaders. But he rebelled at the thought of using the white house table to advance his political fortunes.

"On two counts," he once said to a friend, "I will not permit my home to be used for political purposes. One is that if I make an intimate of a man in politics it isn't long before he wants me to do something which I ought not to do. The other is that if I have a certain senator, say to luncheon, he goes back to the senate and casually remarks in the cloak rooms where the senators sit around smoking and talking: 'The president said to me at luncheon at the white house today * * *' and so on. Here in Washington there is such a craving to get close to the presidency—as if there was something really important about it that would rub off, that many can not resist the inclination to brag and boast that they are in the president's confidence. This not only may hurt some good friend and supporter who has not been to the white house for luncheon but in time it may destroy the effectiveness of others who had been at lunch. The others may become jealous and refuse to work with him. His leadership, if he has any, is likely to be destroyed. All of this simply means that a president must isolate himself during his term of office."

This attitude on the part of Mr. Wilson was never thoroly understood by the people of Washington. Loyal supporters and friends in Mr. Wilson's own party felt hurt by it and some became critical because of it. The Wilsons earned the reputation of being exclusive simply because they did not invite leaders, so-called leaders, self-imagined leaders, political characters and others to the white house. As a matter of fact, there was a simple endeavor on Mr. Wilson's part to play no favorites.

"I can't have the whole senate to lunch," he commented, "so I can not have any of them. The moment I make an intimate of anyone, other good friends of whom I am just as fond are hurt because they think they are slighted."

The same policy was followed by Mr. Wilson in his daily game of golf. On a few occasions Colonel House went to the golf course with him but as the colonel did not play he walked about the course or waited for the president on a seat beside a tee. Dr. Cary T. Grayson, Mr. Wilson's physician, was a constant golf companion. No one could feel slighted, Mr. Wilson thought, if he played golf with his physician. After his second marriage Mr. Wilson occasionally took his wife to the golf course and she played for several weeks but the Virginia hills were much too hard to climb and Doctor Grayson again became the golf partner, continuing until Mr Wilson was stricken. Woodrow Wilson declined any special consideration at the club house because he was president. He dressed at the white house and at the conclusion of his game donned his sweater or coat and rode back to the executive mansion for a shower. He was always a "regular fellow" with other players he encountered on the course. Frequently those in front would ask him to play thru but he would not take advantage of the offer extended him because he was president of the United States. As a result members of the club would prefer to lose a ball which of course gave him the right to play thru. He invariably made some pleasant remark about the game, the weather or the incident of the play and thanked the player who let him pass.

"If I could just hit the ball as squarely as I hit these daisies I could play a great game," he remarked on one occasion while he swung at several daisies growing on the green, clipping the heads off each. "My right eye," he explained to a group of golfers, "is like a horse's. I can see straight out with it but not sideways. As a result I can not take a full swing because my nose gets in the way and cuts off my view of the ball. That is the reason I use a short swing."

The day after election in 1916, the president and Doctor Grayson were playing No. 18 when they passed other players going down to No. 1.

"How is your game today, Mr. President?" one of the players called.

Mr. Wilson waved his hand and called back, "Grayson has me three down, but I don't care, I am four states up on yesterday's election."

Altho the Virginia course which he played was a hard one he made it in the nineties, sometimes getting as low as 92.

Mr. Wilson really never took up golf seriously until after he entered public life. There is no doubt that the watchful attention given him at the white house, the insistence on recreation every day, had much to do with the prolongation of his life. From a frail individual who never seemed in good health while at Princeton, the same man began to glow with the vigor of health after he reached the white house.

Mr. Wilson used to say that he needed eight hours' sleep but required nine. He was one of the few persons who could fall fast asleep sitting in the front seat of an automobile or in a Pullman chair. He disliked ice water and always had difficulty getting what he wanted when he ordered cooled water. He did not take cream in his coffee. He drank moderately. Some of the newspapermen who accompanied him on the naval yacht "Sylph" down the Potomac to Alexandria on Washington's birthday just after Secretary Daniels had made the navy "dry", remember his discomfiture when he discovered that the dry order was being literally obeyed and that nobody had a stimulant. Mr. Wilson felt in need of it as he had been suffering from a cold for several days and the icy blasts sweeping across the river did not make him feel any better. What Mr. Wilson thought or said about the "dry" order that day was not made public.

NO AUSTRALIAN DESERT

EXPLORER DECLARES REPUTED WASTE TO BE FERTILE LAND.

Young World Traveler Crossed It and Found Great Agricultural Possibilities.

New York Times: The so-called "Great Australian Desert," which was upposed to extend over an area of many thousands of square miles in the northern territory and north-eastern part of western Australia, does not exist, according ot Michael Terry, a twenty-five-year-old world traveler, who arrived in New York last week on his way to England to lecture before the Royal Geographical society and the Overseas club. He declares the "desert" is rich, fertile land, capable of development if irrigated.

The fact that this British society has requested Mr. Terry to appear before them lends credence to the statements he makes. Th youthful Anglo-Australian is among the very few "laymen" who have been accorded this honor. He recently made a 3,000-mile trip on a second-hand Ford thru trackless wilderness. His voyage of adventure, research and discovery has never been previously made in these circumstances. The trip, which lasted seven months, started at Winton, Western Queensland, and finished at Broome, Western Australia.

In this period Mr. Terry dodged death four times; once from an infuriated buffalo, which charged his automobile; twice from bush fires, thru which escape seemed impossible, and on another occasion from the lack of water and food. He found bituminous deposits, which leads him to believe there are vast oil regions in the interior waiting to be developed, and he also found amethysts. On many occasions he was able to observe the Australian blacks, who bury their dead in the trees and dance the wild, weird corroboree dance.

Describing his journey, which was taken by himself and a companion who has since gone to sea, Mr. Terry said yesterday:

His Story of the Trip.

"We made the trip thru the heart of the northern territories thru lands little known to white men. In fact, in the whole vast area there are not more than a handful of settlers, and for months on end we never saw sign of civilized habitations. In all we covered more than 3,000 miles of trackless wilderness. After we had bought the car from a scrap-heap in Winton for a few dollars, we patched it up and put a special body on it to protect us against weather conditions. We also made and built a special trailer to carry the heavy supplies and fuel necessary for the journey.

"We started across northern Australia early last year and arrived at Broome on the west Australian coast late this winter. For about 700 miles of the trip we traveled thru country without the faintest sign of a trail. Once we spent fourteen days doing eighty miles. That was while we were crossing a range of mountains near the Armstrong river. The first part of the trip was right across the Barcley Table Land. From there we dropped down onto lower country and later climbed up onto Antrim Table Land, which was very soon traversed. Eventually we arrived at Hell's creek in western Australia. Thence we struck the old Tanami track and followed it down to Derby, which is only 140 miles from Broome.

"Previous 'explorers' in order to enhance their exploit have declared the region we traversed to be a 'great desert.' They have depicted the region as something worse than the Sahara wastes, till their listeners have shuddered at their tales. It is nothing of the kind. We found the land thruout to be composed of a fine black, rich and fertile soil, instead of the dreary area of sand this section of Australia is reputed commonly to be. If it were exploited properly, if railroads were built, and if the necessary irrigation was made, it would be developed beyond belief. The rainfall here is only about twenty inches per annum, but the rivers are plentiful, tho dry a large portion of the year. Indeed this part of the world presents great possibilities from an agricultural point of view. In the whole of its 530,000 square miles there are only 4,000 white men, and they are all on the fringe.

Believes There Is Oil.

"The government rents in many instances land in this district at the rate of 25 cents per square mile per year. I found a substance which a geologist subsequently pronounced to be a bituminous deposit. This pointed to the fact that somewhere in this hidden wilderness is a vast natural reserve of oil. It is possible that some of the richest wells may be eventually opened up there. Already the government is prospecting a few hundred miles distant from where I found the bituminous substance. I mean to go back next year and see if there is not a fortune in oil waiting to be picked up. In any case it is worth a chance at 25 cents per square mile per year.

"Adventures I had aplenty. I don't want to dwell on them, but I did not expect to come thru the trip unscathed. They were not as alarming as might be expected in a territory as wild as the northern district. The first unpleasant experience was after the seventh week out. We were snorting along peacefully in an old Ford near some small trees when a buffalo, which, for some reason or other, had left the herd, dashed out and charged the car. Incidentally, a buffalo is the only dangerous animal thruout the whole of Australia. The beast was so close that we had no time to level our rifles, which were at the moment at the back of the machine. When he was about ten yards from us and evidently prepared to hurl us sky high I started to race the engine, more by accident than design, I admit. The old Ford made a great deal of noise under pressure. The buffalo paused in its rush, lifted its head, stared at us, then made off with a disdainful snort. The specimen we saw then was enormous. He was nearly twice as big again as a large bullock, and I would estimate his horns were fully seven feet long.

Trapped by a Bush Fire.

"A few days later we were trapped by a bush fire. I never knew how this started but I suspect it was unfriendly natives, who wished to see us roast alive. From all sides we saw the flames, towering high and roaring like 10,000 blast furnaces, swiftly close in on us. Neither I nor my companion thought we had a chance in a thousand, but at the last moment the wind shifted. That left us a fiery avenue with flames about fifteen feet high to rush thru. We backed the car a bit, took a flying run and came thru a wall of flame with nothing worse than a bad scorching. I was greatly afraid the petrol tanks would burst. Anyway, it was a close touch.

"Something of the same nature occurred the following week. That convinced me it was not an ordinary bush fire, but the work of enemies. On this occasion we had warning of the danger in time and managed to escape in comparative comfort.

"Number four adventure was during the latter stages of the journey. First we ran out of gas more than fifty miles from the next cattle station. That meant we had to proceed on foot in order to get the necessary supplies. We were also pretty low as regards food and water. We calculated, however, if we traveled light we could do it before our supplies were exhausted. The second day we got lost in the bush. I cannot adequately picture with words the utter sense of loneliness and helplessness we felt. After a few hours it seemed as if we were condemned to go on wandering until we dropped from sheer exhaustion. At the end of the third day I succumbed from lack of water, food and from fatigue. My mate, however, was still able to keep on his feet. He made me comfortable under a tree in the shade and gathering all his energy and his wits finally made his way out and reached the station. By the time he came back I was in a pretty bad way. We had to rest up for a week before we had strength enough to go back to our Ford."

Plumbing in the basement of Governor Bryan's mansion broke in two different places in the past ten days and caused leaks. No damage was done and the broken pipes have been replaced. They are iron distribution pipes supposed to be thirty-two years old. The governor has an appropriation of $10,000 upon which to draw as an insurance fund to cover such cases. The pipes in the mansion were originally put in for a hot water service but are now used for steam heat. The pressure from the state house boiler plant which furnishes heat is said to be too strong for any ordinary plumbing to say nothing of worn out pipes.

Steve Boucher, thirtyfive, who was arrested at a farm near Curtis, Neb., Monday and taken to Holdrege, Neb., where he was met by Constable Immenhausen and brought to Lincoln, Monday night, was arraigned in Justice Stevens' court, Tuesday morning on a charge of failure to pay alimony, where he pleaded not guilty. The return date was set for March 7. He did not furnish the $500 bond which was set and was taken to the county jail. Ethel Boucher, his wife was granted a divorce in district court, on the eighth day of March, 1920, and awarded $60 a month. alimony Boucher said that he would have left for Denver in thirty minutes after the time he was arrested by the Frontier county sheriff, Monday.

STILL BEHIND HIS TAX BILL

COOLIDGE NOT TO COMMIT HIMSELF ON COMPROMISE.

Statement at White House Disposes of Rumors President Approves of Measure Passed by House.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Coolidge still stands squarely behind the adminsitration tax bill and he will not commit himself in advance whether he will veto or sign any other tax measure that may be passed by congress, it was declared at the white house today. The statement was designed to dispose of recent rumors that the president had informed administration leaders in congress that he approved of the compromise bill passed by the house.

The president's position on the tax question is the same as he expressed it in his message to congress and in subsequent public statements that he had made, it was declared.

with taking two hens from the chicken house and tying them up. If chicken thieves had invaded the chicken house and had been surprised at their thievery they would not have halted long enough to let Balster drive into the garage and then starting closing its doors. They do not shoot to kill and they would have taken the chance to make their getaway in their car. It is also pointed out that chicken thieves do not tie up their prey when they go a thievgin.

The belief that Balster was waylaid and murdered has some facts to support it. One is that if he yet had one garage door to close, why should he have tre doorkey in his hand? Another is that after he was shot down his murderer went out to the hen house and fixed things there so as to give the officers a wrong scent as it did, that chicken thieves killed him. The fact that he was shot while apparently closing the second door shows that he had not had either time or opportunity to discover anybody at the chicken house, approximately a hundred feet away.

There was no indication of a struggle. His clothes were not mussed up. Every indication points to the fact that the man who killed him walked up to him as he was closing the garage door and shot him in cold blood. The powder burns on his body and the fact that the gun wads were found in the body show the gun was held close to him. A gaping hole was torn in his right chest by the shot.

There is evidence to show that the murderer drove to the scene of the crime in a stolen car. J. W. O'Neill drove his Dodge car into Utica Saturday veening and went into a picture show. When he came out the car was gone. At midnight it was found in the north part of the town, just where a man would be likely to have abandoned it after he had driven back from the farm. A pair of gloves that O'Neill said were worth approximately $5.50 were missing from the car. A pair of gloves was found on the Balster farm twenty-five feet from the scene of the sooting, where the car would naturally be parked. O'Neill was in Grand Island yesterday on business, having gone there before he had heard of the murder

County Attorney McKillip said that he would see Mr. O'Neill on his return today and see if he could identify the gloves found as his property. Chief Olson says that the gloves found are of about the value O'Neill set on his lost property.

Some of the town gossips insist that the authorities are wasting valuable time, and that the same crowd of terrorists that attacked Gus Shumann, sixty-five, also a bachelor farmre living four miles north of Utica, on February 2, killed Balster. There were five masked men in the crowd that attacked Saumann. Two of them, he says, knew him and called him by name, and he is said to have asserted that he knew who they were.

Shumann's lips, however, have been sealed by the threats made by the men before they left him after having scorched his feet and forced him to tell the hiding place of his money. They told him that if he ever told his suspicions as to the identity of any of them or made any trouble about it, he would be killed. Shumann has never told, but as he was a witness before the coroner's jury yesterday, it is believed that he finally gave their names.

However, officers themselves do not hold this connection because the methods used in the Balster murder are entirely different from those employed in the attack on Shumann.

Ed Balster had a shotgun in an upper room of his house. This was taken by the members of the family back to Utica, where the parnets live. They say it had not apparently been used. Among the other men brought before the jury in his secret session yesterday were Foy Chapin, who first discovered the body, the docotr who examined the body and Louis Balster, a younger brother, aged twenty-seven, who told the officers that he was about town till about 10 o'clock Saturday night and hten went to a dance. A number of other witnesses were called by the jury, among them the father of the victim.

The reason for the belief that it was local talent is that no stranger was seen about the town, in the town or immediate countryside that day or evening, and the fact that a stolen car was taken and then left in the town. No robbers from the outside would be at all likely to drop in on a farmer who was known to carry only small sums.

The coroner's jury examining into the deaht of Ed Balster had not completed its work at 2:30 this afternoon, and expected to be in conference the rest of the day. Its members are:

Rex Davies	Clem Ness
Hugh Hannon	D. Trump
Myron French	Ernest Bereuter

Mr. Balster's funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon.

Tells Inquirers What Can and Cannot Be Done Legally Under the Laws of the State.

Trapshooting on Sunday is forbidden by section 9795, H. A. Olderog, of Sarpy county, is informed by the attorney general.

Dr. C. C. Wallingford of Ogallala is informed that the attorney general concurs in the opinions of the county attorney that any gas driven vehicle is subject to the motor laws of the state and that no one under sixteen can lawfully operate the same. The question propounded relates to the use of miniature automobiles run by gas intended for children to ride in.

The attorney general has given an opinion to Frank Loucks of Fullerton holding that in the event a county treasurer fails to collect the full interest due on taxes the amount thus overlooked can be collected from the taxpayer. Whether there has been a default upon the former treasurer's bond depends in such cases upon the provisions of the bond, tho ordinarily there is no default until it has become impossible to collect the taxes.

holder. Am perfectly (word missing) that when present hysteria is over and if matter is weighed in any court proceedings, that you will be thoroly vindicated and (sentence unfinished).

"The company cannot legally be made to suffer for the act any official acting unofficially. Everyone here would be pleased to help lift the burden off your shoulders. Hope that your realization the equity the contract will give you aid and comfort at a time when politics seems to be the master.

(Signed) "J. A. Y."

The Doheny telegram was sent two days after Doheny revealed to the committee that he had loaned Former Secretary of the Interior Fall $100,000.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh at this juncture read to the committee the correspondence he had with Doheny regarding a proposal that they become associated in a business venture in December 1923.

Code Given by Burns.

After letters and telegrams exchanged between Doheny and Walsh were read to the committee, Walsh swung back to the McLean code telegrams. He asked Friedman, the war department code expert, who deciphered them what code was used.

The messages were in conformity with the code given me by William J. Burns of the department of Justice,' ' Friedman answered

Friedman said the Doheny telegram from Los Angeles signed "J. A. Y." was in private code, probably used by the Doheny company.

Freidman was unable to explain one message which said "Eliminate every other word in previous message." He thought it referred to a message so far undiscovered.

"What is your employment?" Walsh asked.

"I am special agent for the department of justice."

"What employment did you have previously?"

"I was confidential secretary to William J. Burns"

"What employment does your husband have?"

"He has been secretary to Mr. McLean for eighteen years."

Walsh produced the telegram signed "Mary" and asked: "Were you in possession of the bureau of investigation code at the time the message was sent?"

"Yes, Mr. Burns gave it to me."

"In whose handwriting is the address and signature?"

"It is mine"

"I show you the translation of the message and ask you if it is accurate?"

"Walsh then took the code message up word for word and asked if the words were correctly translated.

Accurately Deciphered

Mrs. Duckstein said it was accurately deciphered, "so far as I am concerned."

"But an absolutely wrong interpretation has been put on it," she added.

"What did you mean?"

"I meant inquiries were being made regarding Mr. McLean being an agent of the department of justice.

"The 'Burns' referred to is William J. Burns, of course?"asked Walsh.

"Yes."

"Did you know McLean was a special agent?"

"I had heard it."

"Did Mr. Burns tell you why he thought this information important?"

"He thought Mr. McLean might wish to resign because of possible embarrassment to the attorney general."

"Why didn't you explain in the telegram what you meant by 'important information.'"

"Well I wrote Mr. Duckstein a letter explaining that."

"Why is your telegram signed 'Mary'?"

"Some few intimate friends call me that."

"But your name is Jessie?"

"Yes, sir."

"With how many code systems were you familiar?" continued Walsh.

"Only one. It was obsolete I am not familiar with the new code."

Mrs. Duckstein was excused and William J. Burns was called.

"It appears that Edward B. McLean was a special agent of the department of justice," said Walsh. "Is that right?"

"That's correct."

"When was he appointed?"

"I don't know. He was appointed before I came in."

"Will you tell us about the conversation you had with Mrs. Duckstein?"

"One of the boys in my department told me inquiries were being made about McLean being an agent of the department of justice I called Mrs. Duckstein and suggested that in view of the fact it might embarrass the attorney general, McLean might resign. I told her it was not necessary to communicate directly with Mr. McLean. I suggested she tell her husband."

"Why didn't you yourself communicate with McLean?"

"It was not my business. I have no right to ask him to resign. I did have the right to suggest it."

Senator Dill asked: "Is Doheny an agent of the department of justice?"

"Not that I know of"

"Or Sinclair?"

"Not that I know of.

"Is there an agent under you named Gaston B. Means?"

"Not now. here used to be."

"Did he do any special work for Mr. Harding?" Dill asked.

"He may have, thru me. I don't recall now."

NOT RIPE FOR CONCLUSIONS

MR. PETERSON DISCUSSES THE TRACTION AMENDMENT.

Says It's a Question of Policy in Relation to Community and That People Should Not Become Excited.

The proposed charter amendment to relieve the traction company of the cost of paving in new territory is a matter of business policy of interest to the community but nothing to get excited over, according to City Attorney Peterson. Itis not the proper time, he said, to present conclusions. He does, however, analyze the situation as he sees it. He holds that the problem of keeping trackage pavement in good repair on paved streets is of more general importance than who shall pay for paving in new territory. The amendment does not propose any change in the present methods of paving upkeep.

"If the subject is to be faced in the entirety," said the attorney, "I believe we should find a way to remedying such situation. The traction company pleads poverty when complaint ismade of the unsatisfactory condition of existing pavement for which it is responsible. The city is now in a position to request the company to make necessary repairs, but is without an adequate remedy when that request is not heeded. Perhaps the solution here would be to have a variable occupation tax on the company payable to the city for use in keeping the track spaces in good repair. By variable, I mean that the tax should be susceptible to change to meet actual requirements. This would place the company in the position of supplying necessary funds and the city in the position to use those funds for the betterment of streets."

In discussing other phases of the proposition, Mr. Peterson said:

"As I see it, the public at large as distinguished from the individual property owner along unpaved trackage should decide the issue on a basis of what is fair, not so much as between the traction company and the public, but as between users of street cars and a comparatively small group of direct property owners along tracks in unpaved streets. Those having no direct property interests at stake will constitute the bulk of the jury. If we could have definite assurance that the amendment would result in lower car fares, a great deal could be said for it. We are fully conscious of the fact that tax and other burdens imposed upon a utility are absorbed in rates and passed on to the user.

"What I suspect people will want to know definitely is whether or not a change in policy such as the company proposes will effect rates in fact. If traction patronage were keeping up so that the rate fare be determined entirely by what constitutes a fair return, a change in policy as proposed would influence rates. At the present time the question is not entirely what is a fair rate, but rather what can the company charge and still retain patronage. On that basis, I should not expect in the immediate future to see a direct relationship between a change in policy as represented in this proposal and the rate fare.

"The second thing which the people should take into account is the hazard which this community in common with other cities of the same class, run of having a failure of street railway service by reason of growing competition of other transportation facilities. We are not ready to do without street cars, and if the shrinkage in patronage continues and there is no relief from operating cost, the breaking point is bound to be reached sooner or later. If the public concludes that we now want to take steps to avoid that result, eliminating this capital cost item will have that result in some degree."

Against Early Marriage.

By Sophie Irene Loeb.

The other night some prominent judges were seated at a table, and one of the discussions that came up was the early marriage.

A large proportion of the cases that come up in the domestic relations court and other courts have been results of the too early marriage. Volumes have been written by people whose opinions have been asked as to what is the best age for young people to marry.

If a survey could be made it would be found that many of the unhappily married people today are so because of the fact that they have rushed into marriage too soon and the difficulty to get out of it is overwhelming.

Many a wife and husband cordially dislike each other today but are loath to break the bonds that bind on account of the children and for other vital reasons.

Of course, it is important that every consideration be given to children while they are in need of their parents, even at some hardship and sacrifice. But this does not make the sorrow less nor minimize the misery of two people who have to live together, tho they have lost their love for each other.

One big lesson to be learned in such cases is to encourage people to wait for marriage until they have more of a surety for happiness. It is my belief that people should not marry before they are twenty-five.

In the olden times the home was the alpha and omega of existence. When people married they settled down to make the home and develop it and to do very little else.

In this age the home is not the entire thought and action in the minds of young people. What with the advent of moving pictures, theaters country clubs and all kinds of outdoor diversions where man and wife constantly are meeting other people and have other activities besides their home life, the chances of each being distracted from the other are much greater.

Therefore, it is most important that young folks become pretty definitely certain that the one they have selected is going to stand the strain and go thru married life as a real partner. Thus, after they have seen something of life their choice at twenty-five will doubtless be quite different than it was at eighteen or twenty.

Of course there are exceptions. There are those who are steadfast and firm in their love. But the man who has loved a girl at eighteen and has continued his affection for years afterward is a rare case. The girl equally so.

The average person will tell you that the person whom they had looked on years ago as a possible life partner would not be their present choice.

I have known young people to tell about their school affairs when they would have laid down their lives for each other at sixteen or eighteen but are mildly interested in each other at twenty-five.

Besides in this day and age woman has more opportunity to choose her husband as a mate rather than as a mere vehicle for securing creature comforts. She can work and wait for the right one to come along. The term "old maid" has lost its sting, and she has a much better chance for a happy marriage than when she hurried to the altar merely because she feared losing the man.

BEAUTIFUL DAUGHTER OF LABOR MINISTER

Miss Elizabeth Ponsonby, daughter of Arthur Ponsonby, new under secretary of state for foreign affairs in Ramsay MacDonald's labor ministry in Great Britain, is one of the most beautiful women in England's younger social set. She is a niece of Sir Frederick Ponsonby and her mother is a daughter of the late Sir Charles Parry.

AMERICAN GOVERNMENT—I. The Formation of Public Opinion.

THE will of the people shall be the law of the land. This is the basic assumption of democracy. Nowhere more than in the United States has this assumption been accepted and revered. Nowhere, until recently, has public opinion held greater sway. It behooves us therefore to pay some attention to this great force which, like currents from a mighty dynamo, drives on the wheels of state. Two problems present themselves. The first concerns itself with the formation of public opinion; the second, with the translation of that opinion into governmental action.

Since public opinion is, in theory at least, the real governing power, it may well be asked—is public opinion always right or is it more often wrong? At a time when the world is crushed beneath the burden of a great war—a war acquiesced in and supported by public opinion in all the countries concerned—one hesitates to answer the query with an unqualified affirmative. Somewhere it seems a note of irrationality must occasionally creep in.

This brings us to our problem. What are the difficulties in the way of the formation of a rational public opinion? Why is it that public opinion is frequently wrong? Two outstanding obstacles present themselves first, certain personal limitations common to the great mass of mankind; second, the existence of numerous and powerful propaganda agencies.

A consideration of the first of these will occupy us to-day.

Chief among our personal limitations are the preconceptions, the prejudices, the biases by which we are all bound. It is the existence of these deflectors of rational thought which has made it impossible to reduce government to anything even nearly approaching a science. These, perhaps, more than any other one thing, are responsible for the errors of public opinion. They affect our thinking in two ways. First, very often they prevent us from obtaining the facts, for it is a truism that frequently we see only those things in life we want to see. It is the existence of religious antipathy which has actually made it impossible for some Ulstermen to see anything good to a Roman Catholic, and vice versa. Prejudice has likewise been responsible for a great deal of the distortion of facts concerning Germany and Russia. But, even where the facts are available, prejudice and preconception distort our judgment. It often happens in our elections that men far more eminently qualified for the particular office in question are passed over in favor of an inferior man. The explanation will be found in the fact that national, racial or religious influences—factors absolutely irrelevant to choosing a man for the particular office in question—have entered in and affected the result.

Needless to say, decisions made on this basis will very often be irrational.

The limited contacts most people enjoy contribute to the same end. For the most part people live in grooves, see few people not in their own class, travel little, read little and, all in all, come in contact with very few points of view not similar to their own. Birth and economic conditions dictate in part the set in which we move. A greater factor, however, in limiting the horizon of the average man is that almost instinctive dislike mankind has of listening to opinions with which they do not agree and which disturb their convictions. And yet, if we are ever to run in a rational way these complex affairs of ours, all points of view must be given a hearing; for in all of them there is likely to be a modicum of truth.

Neither of the foregoing defects can be remedied save at the cost of time and trouble, and the limited time the average citizen devotes to public affairs is in itself a serious problem. How limited this is, is best revealed by self-analysis. Few statistics are available on the subject. The few we have, however, indicate that not more than ten minutes a day are devoted to this important task. When one considers the amount of time the average business man devotes to his business in contrast to the amount he devotes to public affairs, one's wonder grows that democracy works as well as it does.

The Men About the Throne

The men who are about Mr. Coolidge and who are assisting in their several ways to promote his ambition to be elected president are with a few exceptions, not moved by love or loyalty or devotion to their hero, writes Edward G. Lowry in the New Republic. The removed Mr. Lodge could bear up under the blow if Mr. Coolidge should be irised out of the picture. So could Mr. Weeks. They have never been his political friends in Massachusetts. The cynical Mr. Moses, the severely practical Mr. Watson and that shadowed figure C. Bascom Slemp are not sentimentalists about their candidate. The list might be enumerated to great lengths.

The attitude of all these patriots is the detached one of the man in the dining car who ordered a broiled lobster and was brought one with one claw missing. The passenger pointed out the deficiency. The waiter explained that the lobsters were so full of life and vitality, in such good condition and high spirits, that they fought among themselves, and that in one of these combats this one now on the table had lost a claw.

"Well," said the passenger, such being his nature, "in that case, bring me a winner."

And such I venture to report, is the precise spirit and attitude of Mr. Coolidge's supporters in the organization." If the edges of his ambitions should be ever so delicately frosted and curled by the chill winds now blowing over the garden of presidential aspirants these shrewd and selfish political horticulturists would plow him under without a pang.

CHANCELLOR AVERY TO SEND MESSAGE

Expression of Good Will to Canadian Friends Who Entertained the Late President Harding at Vancouver.

A letter from the Vancouver Sun, asking Chancellor Avery to send a message of good will from the University of Nebraska, to be used on the presentation of a painting of President Harding to the national press gallery at Washington, was received Tuesday. The chancellor expected to comply at once with the request. The painting commemorates President Harding's visit to Vancouver July, 1923, which was considered of historic and international importance, because it was the first visit to Canada of a United States president. "Standing in Stanley park before an audience of 40,000," says the Sun's letter, "President Harding with outstretched arms, said: 'I extend my arms to you in fraternal greeting.'" The Sun commissioned John Innis to paint the gathering with President Harding as the central figure. The picture is entitled, "President Harding in Canada."

HINTS FOR THE MOTORIST

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH.

Why Ignition Magnetos Won't Run Lights

So many correspondents inquire whether lights can be run from ignition magnetos of the ordinary type, that it seems desirable to explain rather fully why this cannot be done. These inquiries come from owners of cars built before the introduction of generator and battery lighting systems, when acetylene and oil lamps were regular equipment, and the reason why these motorists consider the possibility of obtaining lighting current from their high tension magnetos is because many owners of Ford cars use their magnetos to run their headlights. They do not realize the radical difference between the Ford magneto and all others, but in fact the Ford flywheel magneto and the high-tension ignition magneto have nothing in common except that their fields are produced by permanent magnets. In order to operate electric lights, a constantly flowing current of considerable volume and at a low pressure—say 6 volts—is required. Such a current the Ford magneto products, for it is essentially a 16 pole alternating current generator, with coarse windings, capable of a considerable output, with no interrupting devices to make the current intermittent and with a fair degree of natural regulation of the voltage it produces. It runs lights just as do the big generators that supply our homes with current. On the other hand an ignition magneto, of the conventional type, is built solely to produce sparks at certain regular intervals—twice each engine rotation in the case of a four cylinder engine—and in the intervals betwene sparks, it gives out no electrical energy. Thru the action of its make-and-break device, current comes out of it only in relatively widely separated impulses each occupying a minute fraction of a second. These impulses have a voltage thousands of times as high as the lights require and their current is too small to heat a lamp filament perceptibly. If any attempt is made to divert the output of a high-tension magneto into a lighting system, its ability to ignite charges is at once annulled. If electric lights are wanted on old cars, the only thing to do is to install a generator, preferably of the type which is run by the fan belt, and a battery as well.

Underloaded Car Rides Uncomfortably.

C. H. L. writes: "I have to drive my five-passenger touring car on long business trips, with no one on board but myself, and am annoyed by the bouncing of the rear wheels on rough roads. When I feed the gas suddenly on hills the driving wheels sometimes slip and the rear-end chatters. How can this be reduced? Would any kind of shock absorbers overcome it?

Answer: Shock absorbers are of questionable value in overcoming very rapid movements of a car, such as caused by bouncing of the tires, but possibly they would be worth trying. You can run your rear tires at considerably lower inflation, when there is no load but yourself in the car, and still not injure them. This will tend to reduce bouncing and consequent slipping. Carrying two rims and tires, has a slight steadying effect on the rear end. Bags filled with sand, carried in the rear compartment, can be used to make up the normal load, in the absence of passengers. The use of oversize rear tires, very lightly inflated might help you some. If the rear-end of the car throws up violently on "bumps" rear snubbers would prove worth while.

Tightening Roller Bearings.

D. B. asks: How can I prevent the breakage of the race rings of the roller bearings in the rear axle of my ——— car? There is a large nut at each end of the casing by which these bearings are adjusted and I think my trouble has come from the bearings being improperly tightened.

Answer: The most important precaution is to avoid getting the bearings too tight. A just perceptible end motion of the axle shaft should be present after adjustment and the wheels, when put on, should spin with perfect freedom and without any grinding noise from the bearings. Some people set the bearings up until they just begin to bind and then let up just enough on the adjustment so that a very slight end play and perfect freedom of spinning result.

MY PRESENTATION AT COURT

Written by Julia Hoyt.

It was the year before the war that I was presented at the court of King George so I cannot be sure that the customs and formalities are the same now as then. However, I do know that there has been no such radical changes as that which King Edward VII made on succeeding to the throne. During the reign of Queen Victoria the presentations were made in the morning (a great trial, I should think). King Edward changed the time of presentation to evening which is still the hour for unmarried girls, and I do not think there is any rule as to its length. The court train is made separately and must hang from the shoulder. This train has to be a certain length but what that length is I now forget, but I should say approximately four yards. In her hair she wears three white ostrich feathers which she must have placed by some English coiffeur who knows the correct way of placing them.

It is a good plan to practice the deep court courtesy a number of times when wearing the train. In fact some girls take special lessons for the courtesy. A week or so before the date of the drawing room the debutante receives a card of invitation to Buckingham Palace. Also, a week or so before the date of her presentation, she and her mother must leave cards on the ambassadress who is to present her. In my case it happened to be the Russian ambassadress. The reason for this was that Mr. Page, (then our ambassador) was in London but Mrs Page had not yet arrived. Had Mr. Page not been there I would have been presented by Mrs Laughlin, the wife of the first secretary, who in Mr. Page's absence would have been charge d'affaires. But as Mrs. Page was in London and Mr. Laughlin in consequence was no longer charge d'affaires I had to be presented by the wife of the ambassador ranking next to Mr. Page thru length of service and this happened to be the Russian ambassadress.

I think the main change that has occurred is that the number of presentations allowed at each drawing room is larger than it used to be, and consequently it is not quite so much of an honor. The year that I was presented there were but four Americans allowed at each drawing room. Also, I am told, that divorcees from other countries than England have been presented since the war. I cannot vouch for the truth of this statement, but I know that if it is true it is a very recent change. Before the war there had never been an exception made to the rule of refusing the admittance of a divorcee to the drawing-room.

Presenting Your Daughter.

The general procedure for the mother who wishes to have her daughter presented is to write to the American embassy in London, saying that she would like her daughter's name to be on the list of Americans to be presented at one of the four drawing rooms. If she is known personally to the ambassador and has any friends who are known to him it is a wise plan to ask them to write him also. This letter should go some months before the first drawing room. I remember in my case we were late in sending it—I think only about six weeks before the time for presentation. Had it not been for a piece of great good luck in the way events happened, I probably would never have been presented. I should have been very disappointed at the time. But I would have kept an illusion, for I was not experienced enough to know that such a very formal occasion was bound to be rather devoid of excitement.

Some weeks after the letter has been written the mother receives a reply from the embassy saying her daughter's name has or has not been accepted by their majesties, and telling her at which drawing room she is to be presented. As a matter of fact I doubt if the king and Queen know anything about who is to be presented; it is left entirely to the discretion of the American ambassador. But in any case, that is the form of the reply.

After the daughter receives a favorable reply, she has perhaps the most interesting moment of the whole proceeding, ordering her dress. It must be white, of course.

Veteran Mail Carried Dies.

BEATRICE, Neb., March 4.—Theodore Leech, seventy-five years old, for eighteen years a rural mail carrier, died at his home here Monday evening of paralysis. Entering the service eleven months after it was established in Beatrice, he retired on a pension in 1921. The break in health came as a result of exposure in the blizzard of 1920 when, in spite of the storm he undertook to carry his route. When nearly completing his duties he was compelled to stop at the city pumping station on the Zimmerman land west of Beatrice where he remained during the night. He is survived by his wife, three daughters and four sons, Harry C. Leech, one of the sons, also being employed in the government service here.

EXPECT GREATEST AUTO YEAR.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—With the most active year in the history of American automobile production barely passed into history and the records for the period of the various automotive producing companies not yet complete automobile manufacturers are now busily engaged preparing to make 1924 another record year for output and sales, with the hope of bettering the 1923 records. This is shown in the announced plans of many producers and is reflected in inquiries and orders for various materials according to estimates which have been compiled here by government officials.

The engagement of Miss Dorothy Kaehler of Palm Beach and Beverly Farms Massachusetts daughter of Mrs. George A. Dobyne and John Charles Thomas celebrated baritone, was announced.

Chicago Tribune Report.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Political developments favor the buying side of all grains on dips. The trade assumes an increase in the tariff on wheat is certain while it is understood both the senate and house agricultural committees have voiced approval of a plan to help Germany and Austria

If farmers expect to get better prices for corn, they had better stop selling, according to the views of many of the trade In some sections however, they have already stopped offering grain.

There is considerable comment on the relatively low price of Canadian oats in Winnipeg. It was said some Canadians are being sold to New England duty-paid

There is little export or domestic demand for rye Houses with export connections were fair sellers of May lard late yesterday

Export business yesterday was 300 000 bushels of wheat, including 80 000 bushels of durums A St Louis handler reported 40 000 bushels of corn sold late Saturday.—Lamson

Omaha Livestock.

OMAHA, March 4.—Cattle—Receipts, 9 000 In most respects the market was a repetition of Monday's trading. Both shippers and packers wanted good to choice steers and were willing to pay strong prices while salesmen found it rather difficult to move the less attractive cattle even on a steady basis. Some prime heavy beeves brought $10 50 Cow stuff was steady to strong, and the same was true of stockers and feeders Sales of beef steers reported at 11 30 a. m.

Hogs—Receipts 22 000. Despite the fact that local supplies were of rather liberal proportions, higher trends at other markets made competition keen and movement was under way to shippers at a seasonable hour at prices that looked strong to possibly 5c higher than Monday Local packers were also in action early and movement was noted on a strong to 5c higher basis. Sales of hogs included:

Sheep—Receipts, 10,000. A broad demand coupled with only moderate arrivals tended to inject considerable strength in the local trade this morning and movement was under way early at prices fully 10@15c higher than Monday. Only a few shearers were at hand which moved readily at fully steady figures Aged sheep ruled around steady.

From Lucile's Diary.

Chicago News: One day last week I happened to meet John Duval downtown and we lunched together I asked him what he had been doing with himself all winter.

"Mostly skating," he replied. "We have had some glorious ice out in Glenwater this year and I skate nearly every evening"

"Oh, what fun," I exclaimed "I adore skating, especially in a place as wild and lovely as your little Glenwater It's away ahead of city parks, isn't it?"

"Yes, it's almost real country. That compensates for living in such a remote suburb If it weren't so far away, Lucile, I'd beg you to come out and skate with me, but dad and mother have gone south and I'm just baching it in one warm wing of the house, so I'm not able to entertain my friends"

"But Johnny, I know where I could go to stay all night out there. That's at the Brucely Browns' If you really want me to skate with you, I'll call up Anna and propose myself for a visit"

"Of course, that's just the thing," he agreed enthusiastically

I went to the telephone and arranged with Anna Brown to go out to Glenwater that very afternoon.

"I'm sorry, Lucile," she said, "that I cannot ask you to stay more than overnight, but I'm getting up a little dinner for some of Brucely's fraternity, a sort of inner circle, and ladies are not expected Indeed, I myself shall be in the kitchen all tomorrow evening."

My first impulse was to offer to stay to help her, but I realized that it would be pretty stupid if we weren't to see the men at all and I feared I would just be in the way if I did offer my services, for the kitchen in Anna's little house is rather cramped. So I merely said that I understood perfectly.

"Well, I wonder who that is," remarked Anna when Brucely left dessert to answer the doorbell

"It's probably John Duval," I answered. "He said he might drop around and take me skating for a little while on your lovely lake"

"Indeed?" said Anna in quite a different tone from that in which she had welcomed me, and said how nice it was to have a glimpse of me, after so long a time since we had seen each other.

However, she welcomed John pleasantly enough, and when I asked her for a key, so that I could let myself in, if she and Brucely happened to wish to go to bed early, she told me to take it from the pocket of her fur coat while she poured a cup of coffee for my cavalier

John and I had a delightful evening The ice was perfect and several times we warmed ourselves at selling "hot dogs," in which we indulged. John expressed a hope that I would come out again to skate, but I fear I shall not be able to, for Anna has let me know unmistakably that I am persona non grata at her house.

She was really rude to me when she telephoned only a few hours after I left. "Lucile," she said acidly, "you'll greatly oblige me by returning my house key by special delivery."

"Have I your house key?" I asked.

"You certainly have, if you haven't lost it," she retorted "I went out this morning to do some of my marketing for the dinner party tonight, and when I returned I found that you had neglected to put my key back in my fur coat pocket. I tried to get in thru a window, but, of course, I couldn't, and I had to leave the flowers and other bundles I had brought home with a neighbor and journey way into the city here to get Brucely's key. I wasn't properly dressed for the city either. It was annoying Now I have to tear back home and do the best I can with the dinner in the remnant of the day this performance has left me."

"Anna," I cried, "wouldn't you like me to go home with you and help you?"

"Heavens, no, Lucile!" she replied, in a tone as emphatic as a slap. I hope dear old Brucely does not find it too difficult to live with Anna, who appears to be developing nerves.

Protect Snow Sheds.

Fighting fires within the restricted area of a city is a difficult matter from fighting fires along hundreds of miles of railroad tracks, writes George F. Paul in St. Nicholas The city fire department can reach its objective within a few minutes; the fire fighters aboard the special train must not only get the right of way to reach the scene of the reported fire, but it may be one mile of fifty miles away.

The Southern Pacific's properties extend over more than 7,000 miles of line on the Pacific system. Much of it is located in lonely and unsettled places Naturally, there are many problems that the fire chief of a city fire department never has to face.

The greatest fire hazard that the company has is its long line of snowsheds over the Sierras to Ogden. It may well be said that there has been more concentrated effort to prevent fires in these sheds than on any other single item of railroad property.

On the American canon route over the Sierras a snowfall of sixty-five feet has been recorded in one season. Where the average seasonal snowfall runs over two hundred inches, snow sheds are necessary in order to maintain regular train service, and so between Blue Canon, at an elevation of 4,700 feet, and a point just west of Truckee, with an elevation of 6,000 feet, a distance of forty miles, there are twenty-nine miles of snow sheds.

The fire fighting apparatus consists of four trains, each equipped with one 350-gallon-per-minute pump, two water-cars holding about 25,000 gallons of water, nearly a quarter of a mile of heavy hose, and all the other equipment needed to fight a severe fire

It takes but a short time to get a fire train under way—a few minutes is enough. When once they get started on a clear track, there are no speed restrictions. This promptness is made possible because steam is kept up on the fire train engines at all times and crews are on duty both day and night.

Some few years ago, with watchmen located in the sheds only, formidable forest fires could obtain considerable headway in the snow-shed district before they were discovered. This led to a search for a point on a commanding elevation from which watchers could have a bird's-eye view of the entire district The searchers selected a point at the top of Red Mountain—Signal Peak, as the government calls it Here, four miles from Cisco, a stone observatory was built, and during the season when there is danger from fires, a twenty-four-hour vigil is kept.

Sensitive Friends.

By Sophie Irene Loeb.

A woman bemoans the fact that she had a party to which she failed to invite a very good friend of hers who should have been present. She had intended to do so, but during the rush to get hte affair ready she had forgotten this friend—one of her best And now there is trouble between them.

This woman tried to explain and asked forgiveness, but it was not forthcoming.

As a general thing you would say that such a friend was not worth having, but the uninvited one is of splendid character in every way, only she is a very sensitive soul.

How many people take offense at some trivial thing and break a friendship that has been in existence for years. And what a foolish thing to do

When a person takes a trivial thing to heart sufficientl yto cause trouble, he has lost something himself which he can never regain. Better look for the big things in a friend and overlook the little ones

There is the friend who gets cross because you have not answered his letter, or the one who feels you have slighted him when you have failed to remember his birthday, or such a person as mentioned whom you have failed to invite to your party.

The test of friendship is not based on such trivial, seeming slights. It is folly to be oversensitive I know people who have been friends for years, who rarely see each other, yet they would go thru anything or bear any troubles at all times, each for the other.

And there are friends who are constantly antagonistic in a business way but are the best chums in private life

There are those who will have arguments on various matters, but the undercurrent of real friendship can never be turned It continues forever. The stuff of which real friendship is made is not sensitive vaniyt.

Any one who wants to prove him self a great friend will waive aside the tiny pin pricks and wait till he has had a real sword thrust before he questions the friendship of the other person

MEN AND THINGS

The cheapest thing in the country today is money when it is considered as in the form of capital. The government can borrow all of the money it needs from our capital and pay no more than 4 1-4 per cent. To get an idea of how cheap capital is sit down and estimate how much money you would have to have safely invested so as to return you as much money as you are earning. Everybody does this if he looks ahead to the time when he wants to retire from daily labor. If you are making $5 a day now that means about $1,600 a year. In order to secure that income from a 5 per cent investment you will have to have $32,000 invested. And how few of us ever accumulate that much of a fortune.

Each new day of the oil scandal investigation brings out new names, so many democrats and so many republicans. One gets the idea from the frantic haste with which other men in public life are dragged into the mess that the popular verdict is to be determined by which party has the largest number of distinguished men tarred with oil; that is, if anybody can be tarred with oil. In fact a lot of bokum is being spilled over the oil lease matter, when it is of less importance from the dollars and cents standpoint than what has been going on elsewhere in the government, not as the result of partisanism but of cold, clammy greed, which is individual.

The fact finding commission that Secretary Works sent out to look into the reclamation projects has unearthed a lot of sensational matter that has obtained but slight publicity, yet which is of great importance. Nebraska is interested because unless the government does the right thing by the men who bought land in the North Platte valley under irrigation a number of them will be ruined financially, and mainly thru the blunders of government officers The government, as we understand the matter from the testimony adduced, is trying to collect, as the cost of putting water on this land just twice as much as the farmer was told it would cost him when he bought And the reason for it, we are informed, is that it was handled as an engineering project and not as a business project. An engineering project is one where everything must be done just so regardless of the cost.

The legislative committee of the federation of retailers reported at the annual meeting that various legislative bills that it had opposed had been defeated at the last session The gent on our right snorted when he read this. He explained that that showed why it was so hard to get any reforms thru a legislative body; that every time a man sought to do this he found himself opposed by selfish interests that used every influence and argument to sidetrack the measures and to induce legislators to be untrue to the best interests of the public they represented. He was also quite sure that it showed that legislators are not what they ought to be.

Every time any state association of whatever kind meets we lose a few additional members from our No-New-Laws-Next-Session organization. Because every time one of these meets it adopts a set of resolutions demanding that this, that or the other sore spot can be cured only by the application of a new law. The merchants, the farmers, the county officers, the state officers, and all the radicals are stirring up the ingredients annd warming up the poultices for application next winter. When, in addition to these volunteer advisers we recall that every candidate has from one to a dozen new law promises out, we can feel sure that everything will be as usual when the next session rolls around.

We come pretty close to putting a black mark up against our favorite supreme court the other day. Nebraska lawmakers long ago adopted a system of classifying counties by their population, and then using this as a basis for fixing a scale of salaries for county officers. In Dodge and Buffalo counties the boards met and decided that there were more people in the county than the last census gave it, and their declaration to this effect automatically boosted the salary of every officeholder. The supreme court says that in the absence of any law defining how the population shall be ascertained, this is lawful. The result is to increase the burden of taxation. We did not put up the black mark because the court's reasoning seems unassailable, but the next legislature ought to remedy the evil and fix the official census as the basis.

THREE RIVERS
BY WALTER WELLMAN

With the letters used to spell the names of the five objects, see if you can spell the names of three very large rivers in the United States. They commence with "P," "S" and "W," respectively.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle: Start at the lower left hand corner, and draw a line thru the name Chester—from that point in the top, draw a straight line to the right hand border, passing thru John. From that point, draw a straight line to the opposite side, passing thru Walter.
